STUDENT GUNMAN WOUNDS TWO IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — A high school teacher and a student were seriously wounded today when another student opened fire with a rifle at a school in nearby Boucherville before fatally shooting himself.

Police said a woman teacher and a student aged about 16 were taken to hospital in serious condition following the shooting at the Ecole Polyvalente de Mortagne, a comprehensive high school.

The student was struck twice in the body by the shots, police said.

The identities of those involved in the shooting were not released.

Tanks Battle in Mideast

By The Associated Press

Furious air, tank and artillery battles between Israel and Syria swirled along the Golan Heights ceasefire line today, and the Israeli military command announced that it had downed six Syrian jet fighters in aerial combat.

While Israeli and Syrian jets fought it out in the Middle East skies, the biggest tank battle since the 1967 Middle East war blazed away on the ground below.

Israeli jet pilots knocked down two MiG-21 planes earlier in the day then bagged another four as afternoon wore on, the military command said.

Syria said it lost one plane and downed two Israeli jets while Israeli spokesmen denied losing any.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv said no Israeli tanks were destroyed and there were no Israeli casualties.

Damascus radio, however, said 14 Israeli tanks were damaged in the fighting.

Syrian heavy artillery pounded Israeli positions along the ceasefire line, and gun and tank shells still were being traded in early afternoon, Damascus radio said.

In four separate waves, Israeli planes bombed and rocketed Syrian army and guerrilla bases, pounding artillery positions and an army radar station, the Israeli military command said.

The jet dogfight brought Syrian aircraft losses since the 1967 war to 39 planes by Israeli count. Israel claimed to have lost only three planes in fights against Syria since the war.

Two Soviet-built Syrian MiG-21s were shot down by the Israeli air force in the last major clash Nov. 9.

The fourth wave of Israeli planes bombed and strafed two Syrian camps in retaliation for continued shelling, a spokesman said.

Two Israeli civilians were wounded in the shellings, a spokesman said.

Meanwhile in the United Nations Israel told a tumultuous committee meeting Monday night that Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Libya, Algeria and Iraq bear the main responsibility for terrorism in the Middle East.

"The worldwide desire for action against terrorist activity applies above all to these governments," Ambassador Reuven Nall of Israel told the UN General Assembly's legal committee.

Arab delegates repeatedly protested that Nall was out of order as he levelled the charges in the debate on curbing international terrorism.

Nall was allowed to continue talking, but he was warned by the chairman, Erick Suy of Belgium, to limit himself to replying to earlier speakers since it was Israel's second speech in the debate.

IRON LUNG MOTHER GIVES BIRTH

Doctors attending Mrs. Millgate, 31, at the country town of Peak Hills, about 250 miles west of Sydney, said the delivery was normal and both mother and child were resting comfortably.

Cities Too Soft —Pollen

Canada's first tri-level conference on urban affairs has given municipalities little reason for optimism because the whole thrust of their approach to the federal government has been wrong, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

In a telephone interview from Toronto where he is one of 200 delegates attending the federal - provincial - municipal conference, Pollen said municipalities should have been working with the provinces to emphasize to the federal government the importance of revenue sharing.

But he said it was the feeling of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities (CFMM) that at the conference "we should not be at all aggressive or antagonistic, or have any confrontation.

"But if you have to fry an egg you have to break it," Pollen added.

As a result of the too-polite approach the federal government had responded by giving or promising "very little."

"They (the federal representatives) have been more

DUTY IN VIETNAM may be ahead for 200 members of the Canadian armed forces should Canada decide to take part in an international supervisory commission to police any ceasefire. Scenes like this one, taken in Ottawa, were commonplace Monday as men received shots to prevent tropical diseases. Locally, nine officers and four non-commissioned officers have been told to stand by.

Gov't to Foot College Tab

The provincial government will take over 100 per cent of capital financing of community colleges in the next fiscal year, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced today.

Dailly also announced that an advisory commission on the integration of all post-secondary education will be named by the government.

The integration of the province's higher learning facilities was the major recommendation of the once-controversial Perry report, commissioned by the former government but never released or even commented upon.

Dailly said the report is now out of date because of the growth of the post-secondary education field, but the integration of these services the government accepts completely.

Taking over all capital financing for colleges means local school district taxpayers will not have to face referendum votes for these costs.

The government anticipates an expenditure of about $10 million in the first fiscal year of the new formula, which will be introduced in legislative form at the winter session of the B.C. House.

Dailly said also that the ultimate aim is for the province to take on all operating costs of colleges, but set no deadline for this change.

Dailly met representatives of the community colleges earlier today to inform them of the changes in financing.

She told them also that in future the government will take more interest in the geographical location of new colleges, which up until now were built only with the approval of local ratepayers.

Dailly told a press conference that the old method of locating colleges did not serve the students well.

The advisory commission on post-secondary education will be named in a few weeks. Dailly said.

Its first task will be to develop legislation which would probably not be introduced until a year from now, at a fall session, at the earliest.

Another major task of the commission will be the formation of a new board to advise on a continuing basis on higher education.

It would be called a "post-secondary board."

"The past decade has been marked by a rapid expansion of post-secondary education institutions — from a single university and two-year college and very limited vocational facilities to two additional public universities, nine colleges, an institute of tech-

CUBA WILL TRY HIJACK TRIO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three men who hijacked a Southern Airways jet too Cuba nine days ago will be tried in Havana on various charges, including extortion, the U.S. state department says.

U.S. officials said the hijackers violated Cuban law when they threatened to blow up the plane if authorities at Jose Marti airport refused a demand to refuel the craft.

Canada Won't Be U.S. Puppet

OTTAWA — Canada will not serve as a representative of the United States or any one side, should a peacekeeping role in Indochina be accepted.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp today laid down the conditions under which Canada would serve on any new supervisory commission in Vietnam—and heading the list is the requirement that the invitation come from all combatants in the warring country.

He met reporters after a one-day visit to New York Monday when he met U.S. secretary of State William Rogers to discuss the proposed peace commission.

Canada has made no commitment, he said. Instead, he "sought clarification" on the proposed make-up of the commission. And he made it clear that Canada would not be interested in joining the supervisory body unless the points on which he sought "clarification" were implemented.

Apart from the unanimous invitation, Canada also wants some higher authority established to receive the reports of the proposed commission: "You cannot have a successful commission without a higher authority to which to report."

It also must be shown that the procedures to be followed by any commission are "workable."

And the fourth and final condition is that such a commission be given freedom of movement.

Sharp said the proposed commission would not be a military peace-keeping operation, but a supervisory commission which would "observe and report."

He said that since there is no agreement on the commission, the points he raised could not be answered. But "I am satisfied the United States understands our position" and he was confident the Canadian concerns would be taken into account during future negotiations.

Prime Minister Trudeau said earlier that Canada is not anxious to become involved in another ineffective role, such as its present membership on the International Control Commission (ICC) in Vietnam. Poland and India are the other two ICC members.

Sharp said Canada has

Martial Law Election in Korea

By DON OBERDORFER

Washington Post

SEOUL — South Koreans go to the polls today to put the stamp of approval on a new national charter granting supreme and virtually unchecked power and unlimited tenure in office to President Park Chung-hee.

Though the new constitution represents a break with the recent past and a veering away from American-style parliamentary democracy, government officials reportedly expect at least 85 per cent approval. Under the circumstances, they may get that or even more.

The referendum is being held under martial law imposed by Park on Oct. 17, when he swept away the old constitution, dissolved the national assembly, imposed press censorship and sent troops and tanks into the streets, all by executive fiat.

The troops and tanks disappeared from view last Saturday night without announcement or explanation, but the state of "extraordinary martial law" continues.

The government has mounted an extensive campaign to explain and extol the proposed new charter, which was prepared by the Blue House (the president's office) and announced on Oct. 27. No word of opposition or even reservation has been permitted in public.

ARRESTED IRA LEADER VOWS HUNGER STRIKE

DUBLIN (CP)— Sean MacStiofain, generally credited as the mastermind behind the Irish Republican Army's three-year guerrilla offensive in neighboring Northern Ireland, was charged today under the Irish Republic's Offences Against The State Act.

In a brief court appearance during which he was ordered held until another court appearance Friday, MacStiofain protested his detention and said he is on a thirst and hunger strike.

"It is my intention to refuse food and liquid as long as I am in custody," he said.

The English-born guerrilla leader was arrested in Dublin early Sunday and charged with being a member of an illegal organization.

Mediation Changed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The controversial mediation commission officially disappeared from B.C.'s labor relations scene Monday and was replaced by the mediation services branch of the provincial labor department in line with new legislation of the New Democratic Party government.

East German Role

UNITED NATIONS (WP) — East Germany moved toward its first membership in a UN agency Monday when UNESCO's executive voted unanimously to accept it and Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said he was prepared to give it observer status in the UN itself.

U.S. Prices Rise

CHICAGO (AP) — They 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed today the conviction of five of the so-called Chicago Seven defendants found guilty of crossing statelines to incite a riot during the 1968 Democratic party's national convention in Chicago.

The court said the defendant's constitutional rights had been violated.

In the ruling, however, the appeals court said the United States government may re-try the five.

Two others were found not guilty.

MACKASEY ON WRIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A writ was filed in federal court Monday alleging that Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey acted unconstitutionally in suspending the right of visitors to Canada to apply for landed immigrant status.

Suraj Sander, a building contractor in Vancouver, said in an interview that the minister's move to plug the loophole was "invalid, ultra vires and unconstitutional because it violated the fundamental principle that Parliament and Parliament alone can change a major interpretation in any act."

"He's acting like a dictator. In this democratic system we can't give power to one minister to do what he likes without going through Parliament."

He said he wanted the court to impose a temporary stay on the minister's order until Parliament reconvenes.

British MPs Protest Rules For Canadian Immigrants

LONDON (CP) — A Conservative member of Parliament has appealed to the government to ease new immigration regulations for Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders.

"On this festival day of loyalty," said John Biggs-Davison, referring to the Queen's silver wedding anniversary, "should we not be assured that our fellow subjects from Australia, Canada and New Zealand will be treated here as members of one family on the basis of reciprocity?"

He was one of a number of Conservatives who protested the "weakening" of historic ties.

Sir Bernard Braine, MP for an Essex riding, said the regulations were "unfair, stupid and in the long term shortsighted." Ten other Conservative MPs joined Braine in signing a motion of protest.

Biggs-Davison raised the point in the House of Commons Monday recalling that new immigration regulations coming into effect Jan. 1 will make it more difficult for Commonwealth citizens to obtain long-term job permits in Britain.

Julian Amery, a junior foreign office minister, countered that Commonwealth citizens will not be treated as aliens.

"They will continue to enjoy full rights here, including the right to vote, to hold public office and the right to join the police and armed forces."

As James Callaghan, Labor member and former home secretary, charged that Amery's reply was misleading, the foreign office minister insisted that "there is nothing in the new immigration rules to make it more difficult for Australians, Canadians or New Zealanders to come here or be less wecome."

Also in London, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said today he is "deeply concerned" about the effect in Canada of proposed new British rules.

Human Rights Take Beating

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Repression of basic human rights appears to be spreading throughout the world in alarming ways, says Amnesty International.

The human rights organization said Monday that its statistics show more people were detained and tortured for their political and religious beliefs thus far in 1972 than in any year since the organization began its work 10 years ago.

Interim reports indicate a record number of complaints has been filed with the organization's field offices regarding torture, detention without trial and mysterious disappearances.

These were reported by Prof. James P. Harrison, the United States representative of the London-based private organization working for the release of "all prisoners of conscience."

He discussed the situation in an interview after presenting Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim with an appeal for the release of 12 prisoners in 12 countries. Amnesty International has consultative status with the United Nations.

Picked to dramatize violations of human rights, the dozen "symbolic" cases are part of thousands whose cases have been reported to the organization.

They include opponents of apartheid in South Africa, Jehovah's Witnesses in Spain, advocates of Formosan independence and critics of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Harris said the use of inhuman methods as a political tool seems to be spreading from Communist or Fascist countries to those with at least the appearance of a democratic system.

He listed the Philippines, Thailand and South Korea where martial law has been declared recently.

Harrison charged that in some countries, notably Brazil, Greece and South Africa, torture is used not only to obtain information but also to "terrorize the population."

Low Welfare Benefits Encourages Welfare—Cities

TORONTO (CP) — The federal and provincial governments were told that the country's welfare system pays benefits so low that recipients cannot break out of poverty.

Municipalities, in a brief to the first federal-provincial-municipal conference, said the welfare system is riddled with contradictions and encourages dependency, not initiative, among recipients.

"A welfare system should encourage self-initiative, not punish it; a welfare system should, ideally, be a process which leads to the elimination of the system itself, that is, the elimination of the need for welfare," the brief said.

The brief suggested that the federal government should consider assuming total financial responsibility for all income support programs for people on public assistance.

Also, work incentives for people on public assistance should be increased to encourage recipients to find at least part-time work, the brief said.

The municipalities' brief said the fundamental problem affecting public assistance policy is the failure to define who is a person in need.

"It allows individual welfare officers to define need in terms of their individual attitudes or arbitrary whims," the brief said.

The municipalities charged that higher unemployment, which increases welfare costs, is a direct result of federal actions.

"The municipalities and provinces must pay the cost of the resulting assistance, even though such costs result from unilateral federal actions," the brief added.

In another brief the municipalities say the federal government has placed too much emphasis on building new houses and not enough on rehabilitating old ones.

The brief also claimed the federal government's role in the provision of housing has been primarily that of a banker.

"The result of the housing programs have not been satisfactory," it said. "The focus has been almost exclusively on the production of new units.

"No effort has been taken to examine the needs of those living in older housing stock to assist in upgrading the dwellings.

Municipalities also called for a tri-level organization that would plan and finance urban transportation systems.

The brief said Canada will become increasingly urbanized to an extent where urban problems and the problem of urban transportation will become more acute.

Local governments do not have the financial base to initiate significant expenditures on comprehensive transportation systems, it added.

In the field of finances, faith in federalism is being undermined by the growing problems facing municipalities.

One of the series of municipal briefs requested that future meeting of federal, provincial and municipal governments examine financial resources of their three levels of government.

The document was critical of a federal move to enter the property tax field by levying a capital gains tax on homeowners. This further eroded municipal financial resources which were not growing as rapidly as the tax field belonging to federal and provincial governments.

"Local institutions face the threat of becoming less and less relevant and this has contributed to the growing skepticism toward federalism in Canada."

nology and a network of vocational schools some of which are not integrated with colleges," Dailly said.

She said the job of co-ordinating all these and new services could be done by a government department "but it seems important to me to involve those people in the field who must live with the decisions taken."

Dailly said the lack of co-ordination of post-secondary education "has, frankly, left me with a very confused situation which cannot continue."

The commission will be a five-member team, Dailly said, but gave no idea of who will comprise it.

Dailly said that a second important recommendation of the 70-page Perry report, which she released just before press time, is that it is essentially that universities have an assured source of operating and capital funds "reasonably matched with enrolment and cost increases, and for an equitable distribution of these funds to each of the institutions."

Asked why she thought the Social Credit government, through former education ministers Leslie Peterson and Donald Brothers, did not choose to make the Perry report public, Dailly said the Socreds apparently believed in giving the individual education institutions autonomy.

However, this autonomy "created confrontation within the areas, created a very bad climate."

"It seems to me that they did not understand the importance of co-ordinating facilities in post-secondary education," the minister said, adding that another thing the Socreds likely objected to was Perry's recommendation for a different finance formula.

Dailly said there is "no way" the NDP government is endorsing the report as a whole, only accepting it as a report from another government. If the advisory commission she names decides to deal with some of Perry's recommendations and make them to her, she said they will be dealt with on that basis.

political and contriving than straightforward and co-operative," Pollen went on.

"They have implied that the British North America Act, the only really constitutional discipline this country has, is fairly flexible."

While both provincial and municipal delegates have been asking for more money to spend on urban development the federal representatives have been claiming that "the BNA is not a sacred cow and we feel we can go into the urban areas and do our own urban thing."

Pollen said that attitude proved "a real shocker" to the provinces who jealously regard municipalities as part of their constitutional jurisdiction and therefore free from federal intrusion.

"If you don't have constitutional clarity and definition of areas of responsibility you don't have any discipline in administration, and therefore none in financing," Pollen added.

Main pourpose of the three-day conference, which winds up late today, is to establish machinery for permanent consultation on urban matters between the federal, provincial and municipal governments.

Pollen said the CFMM had suggested setting up a secretariat for this purpose but this had been "shot down" by the provinces who looked with abhorrence on the possible creation of new arm of bureaucracy.

offered to place its 19-man ICC contingent at the disposal of the new commission in the initial period preceding a conference.

He said there have been consultations with other party leaders in Canada about the proposed commission.

In Washington last week, a U.S. state department spokesman was quoted as saying there was "agreement in principle" from four countries regarding participation in the commission. They were identified as Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland.

But Sharp said today that this was not accurate so far as Canada is concerned. He first had to establish the type of commission involved and the conditions under which it would operate. This was the reason for his talks with Rogers.

In Paris, Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc opened their second closed-door peace meeting in a suburban villa.

The meeting took place in the same closely guarded two-storey villa at Gif-sur-Yvette, 15 miles southwest of Paris, where the two met for 5½ hours Monday. French sources said the villa is the property of the French Communist party.

Kissinger opened what could be the final phase of his negotiations with Tho Monday.

On the war front, ground action in South Vietnam intensified as the ceasefire negotiations continued. Communist forces shelled Da Nang before dawn and made a series of hit-and-run attacks in the Saigon region. Heavy fighting was reported for the fifth successive day just south of the demilitarized zone and there also was hard fighting in the central highlands below Pleiku.

In the continuing battle for territory along the northern frontier, the North Vietnamese fired more than 1,000 artillery and mortar shells into the South Vietnamese marines trying to drive north from Quang Tri City.

. . . KOREAN ELECTIONS

Committee have fanned out across the country to smoothe the way for what has been officially named the "shiwol yushin" — in English, the "October revitalization" of the nation. According to informed sources, civilian officials and Korean military officers from field grade up have been directed to write 20 letters each in support.

Slogans praising the national "reforms" appear as subtitles on television programs, public service "commercials" on the radio, on streamers hanging from buildings and banners draped across streets, and in special type on the front pages and the crime-courts-government pages of every Korean language newspaper.

During a heavy rain this afternoon, well-dressed men identified by white armbands passed out pro-charter leaflets to citizens taking refuge in the pedestrian tunnels under Seoul's main thoroughfare. The leaflets bore such slogans as "without anyone slipping by, making the flowers of constitutional revitalization bloom with your vote" and "let's plant Korean-style democracy on our soil."

The opposition to the new regime, which undoubtedly exists, has not been heard. Leading figures of the opposition political parties and some religious and social leaders have been under house arrest or accompanied everywhere by Korean CIA agents. At one time or another, at least a dozen opposition political figures are reported to have been detained in government facilities.

At least 30 citizens have been tried and convicted in military courts martial for fabricating or circulating "groundless rumors," which is an offence under the martial law decree. According to public announcements, a Yongdungpo merchant was sentenced to three years in prison for "defaming the chief executive" and spreading rumors while talking about the "October revitalization." A Seoul diary farmer was sentenced to three years imprisonment for writing a letter to an assemblyman urging a fight against the "reforms."

The previous constitution limited the presidential tenure to three terms and would have required Park to step aside in 1975 — but the new constitution contains no such limit. This is considered the most fundamental of all the charter changes by many foreign and domestic observers here, but the press has not been permitted to make it plain. Newspapers have been warned not to draw comparisons of their own between the old constitution and the proposed new charter, and have limited themselves to printing unsigned explanations of the need for the "revitalization."

The press submits to daily censorship, though the previously obligatory "passed by censor" labels have been dropped from newspaper pages. When the government objected to a headline carried in the Dong-a Ilbo, one of Seoul's most respected daily papers, an editor and two makeup men were taken into custody for 24 hours of questioning and some of them were beaten.

Under the proposed new charter, the president will no longer be popularly elected, being chosen instead by the more than 2,000 members of a "National Conference for Unification."

CHARTRAND

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — Real Chartrand was sentenced Monday to be hanged April 20, 1973, for the murder of a police constable.

Mr. Justice Guy Mathieu of Quebec Superior Court pronounced the sentence a half hour after a 12-man jury delivered a guilty verdict on a capital-murder charge. The jury deliberated six hours.

Chartrand was accused of shooting Constable Gabriel Labelle of the Ste. Therese police in October, 1971 while the officer was investigating a robbery.

The jury recommended clemency, but when Mr. Justice Matieu asked Chartrand if he had anything to say after sentencing, he replied in a low, clear voice: "I refuse clemency."

The recommendation will be included in Justice Matieu's report on the sentence to Justice Minister Jerome Choquette.

Chartrand's lawyer, Michel Proulx, said he would carry an appeal "all the way."

It was the second death sentence passed in Canada in four days. George McNamara of Orillia, Ont., was sentenced in Prince George, Friday to be hanged in February for the murder of a prison guard.

Many Municipal Posts Filled by Acclamation

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost a quarter of British Columbia's 550 municipal vacancies were filled by acclamation Monday as nominations for the Dec. 9 civic elections closd in most areas of the province. There are 1,001 candidates in the running for mayoral, aldermanic and school board seats.

Of the 30 mayoralties up for grabs around the province's 142 cities, towns, districts and villages, 15 chief magistrates were returned to office without having to face challengers Dec. 9. This is the off-year for mayoral contests, with the bulk of the terms expiring in December, 1973.

The only major population centre in B.C. not voting Dec. 9 is the city of Vancouver, which operates under its own charter from the provincial government. In Vancouver, nominations close Nov. 29 for the mayoralty, city council, parks board and school board and the election is slated for Dec. 13.

In addition, school board nominations in a number of small rural areas will close next Monday.

Across the province, 40 aldermanic vacancies and 56 school board seats were filled by acclamation, mainly in small villages and some of the sparsely populated northern districts.

School financing also figures prominently in the $156 million worth of money bylaws that boards and councils will be asking the voters to approve on election day. About $43 million of the total is for education, roughly $9 million for recreation and $10 million for capital projects and general purposes such as sewer systems and road repairs.

Four areas will vote on whether to permit Sunday sports and entertainment — the districts of Kent and Terrace, the town of Ladysmith and Fort St. James village. Only one community has a plebiscite on liquor scheduled, Spallumcheen district in the Interior, where voters will decide whether to allow a liquor outlet within its boundaries.

And another community — Duncan — is asking its voters if they want to keep the place a city or have it revert to town status. Duncan has only 1,867 voters but is by no means the smallest of the 30 cities in the province. (See Page 20.)

Among the mayors returned to office unopposed was Muni Evers of New Westminster. Two other mayoralties are up for grabs in the cities: Langley, where incumbent D. L. Nicholas is being challenged by W. G. Duckworth Jr., and Kimberley, in the midst of a four-way battle for the mayor's chair.

In the districts, Mayor Ron Andrews of North Vancouver was returned by acclamation, but Mayor Arthur Langley of West Vancouver is being challenged by Stephen Stratton.

Four other district mayoral incumbents are also fighting for re-election: Louis Ungero in Sparwood, Pat Breenan in Squamish, John Springer in Kitimat and Ken Ford in Campbell River.

UVic Faculty Funds Cut

Unless it can persuade the board of governors to increase its grant, the University of Victoria faculty association will have to dip into its own reserve funds of $7,000 to keep operating.

Only 15 of 400 faculty members attended an emergency meeting of the association, called Monday night after the board announced it would give the association only $2,000 this year, rather than covering all association costs as it has in the past.

The board decision also stated: "There is no guarantee of a grant to the association beyond April 1, 1973."

Faculty association president John Greene stated: "Most of the $2,000 will be spent by the end of the month."

He said the announcement came "like a bolt from the blue."

"I couldn't begin to estimate how much we've spent in past years," Greene said.

"We just had an agreement with the board," he said. "As far as we were concerned the university covered our office costs.

"But they've got no obligation to support us."

The faculty association promotes the "legitimate interests" of UVic's faculty, oversees the quality of education and organizes faculty social functions.

"It's certainly nothing like a union," Greene added.

Association fees are $10 for all faculty members.

CIGARETTE PRICES INCREASE

Some cigarette smokers were in for a shock today as many small grocery stores throughout Victoria raised the package price of cigarettes two cents.

A survey of small confectionaries showed about half already raised their prices and more were considering an increase within the next two weeks.

Most department stores and local tobacco shops, however said they still had no definite plans to increase prices in response to a rise in wholesale costs announced last week by Imperial Tobacco Company.

School Democracy Backed

After lengthy discussion, Greater Victoria school board approved a motion Monday night that all school children should be encouraged to learn democracy by having meaningful responsibilities in school.

Dr. Philip Ney, put forward the motion because he felt children raised in an authoritarian atmosphere made immature adults. After the debate he agreed to delete the word "taught" and the motion passed.

Trustee Lavinia Greenwood wanted the motion to instruct principals to devise ways to introduce students to democratic participation.

Ney said that that smacked of authoritarianism.

"Parents and teachers fear children will take over the schools if given a chance, although I feel this is certainly not the case," he said.

Trustee Harry Graham was of the opinion that the introduction of democratic decision-making in schools would "lead to chaos."

Trustee Walter Donald said he favored the motion, recognizing, that: "You introduce democracy and you're introducing very dangerous stuff into schools."

Trustee Carron Jameson said he did not know of any country that had a democratic government.

"They all have representative governments and that's not at all the same thing," he said.

He said Ney's motion that children should be "taught" the practical aspects of democracy was an "oligarchical fiat in itself."

Board chairman Allan McKinnon suggested that the word "taught" should be struck out.

Rescue for the Skagit

The Skagit Valley flooding controversy has been revived by British Columbia's new Resources Minister Robert Williams in a welcome reversal of the recent Social Credit government's stand.

Some 5,700 acres of the valley, near the Canada-United States border in the Manning Park area, are threatened with flooding if the Ross Dam in Washington State is raised to provide additional hydro power for the Seattle City Light company. The previous B.C. government approved the plan, and accepted a leasing arrangement of about $35,000 a year — to continue for 99 years — in return for its permission. But conservationists, when the plan became known, rallied on both sides of the border to preserve the valley from inundation.

Social Credit Lands and Forests Minister Williston, was forced to recall an advertisement in the B.C. Gazette which sought bids for logging the area to be flooded, and the whole project has lain in doubt for the past several years. The Seattle power interest has an application before the Federal Power Commission in Washington for permission to proceed with the addition to the Ross dam, which would back the water reservoir eight miles further into Canadian territory, and this may not be heard until next spring.

It is because of the international aspect of the matter that Mr. Williams' announcement that the project would not be allowed to proceed fails to carry conviction. Both Ottawa and Washington are involved, and even Canadian Environment Minister Jack Davis' assurance of full support from the government appears to leap over a few hurdles which may prove difficult.

Seattle City Light holds that it has an agreement with the B.C. Government. Whether this can be nullified unilaterally is a question probably for the courts. Mr. Williams says the province has legal advice that the agreement will not stand up, and it would be nice to believe that this is the case.

One of the salient factors in the situation is the assertion by some participants, including the former mayor of Seattle, that the increase in power output arising from the higher dam would be negligible in comparison with the vastly increased power supplies soon to be needed by the Seattle area. Destruction of eight miles of the Skagit Valley would therefore be a needless sacrifice, since other power sources would soon be required on a scale which would override any interim benefits from a higher Ross Dam.

This appears to be an unanswerable point in favor of saving the Skagit Valley for its obvious recreational advantages. The problem is to make it stick amid the legal arguments. And another problem may be to handle possible proposals for some alternative concession to United States interests. In any case, it is heartening to find the new provincial government coming out solidly for the preservation of a natural public asset, rather than jumping at the chance — as the Social Credit administration did — to sell more of Canada for cash — and petty cash at that.

Fore-armed

Being told what to expect by way of presidential initiative from the United States can help prepare us for its possible effects. Had Canadians known ahead of time of Mr. Nixon's economic policy moves scheduled for August 15, 1971, we might have avoided the embarrassing plight of pleading our case in the glare of the world's footlights.

Energy planning is occupying more of the president's time and is to be Mr. Nixon's priority concern in 1973. This is the gist of Commerce Secretary Peterson's remarks recently in Chicago to the American Petroleum Institute. He said: "We are leaving an era in which energy was regarded as a perpetual motion machine. In short, the era of low-cost energy resources is almost dead. Popeye is running out of cheap spinach."

By the sounds of it, Mr. Nixon's forthcoming pronouncements on "energy strategies" could seriously affect our own position. It would be very optimistic to believe that our policies and American policies will not collide. Canadian energy policies are in a chaotic condition, suffering in a jungle of jurisdictions.

Mr. Nixon's heralded strengthening of the Executive Branch in Washington may, in short, hit Canada hard if the American energy policy is pursued like the economic thrust of last year. It is time Canada decided what its needs are and will be, before considering the export of further energy resources.

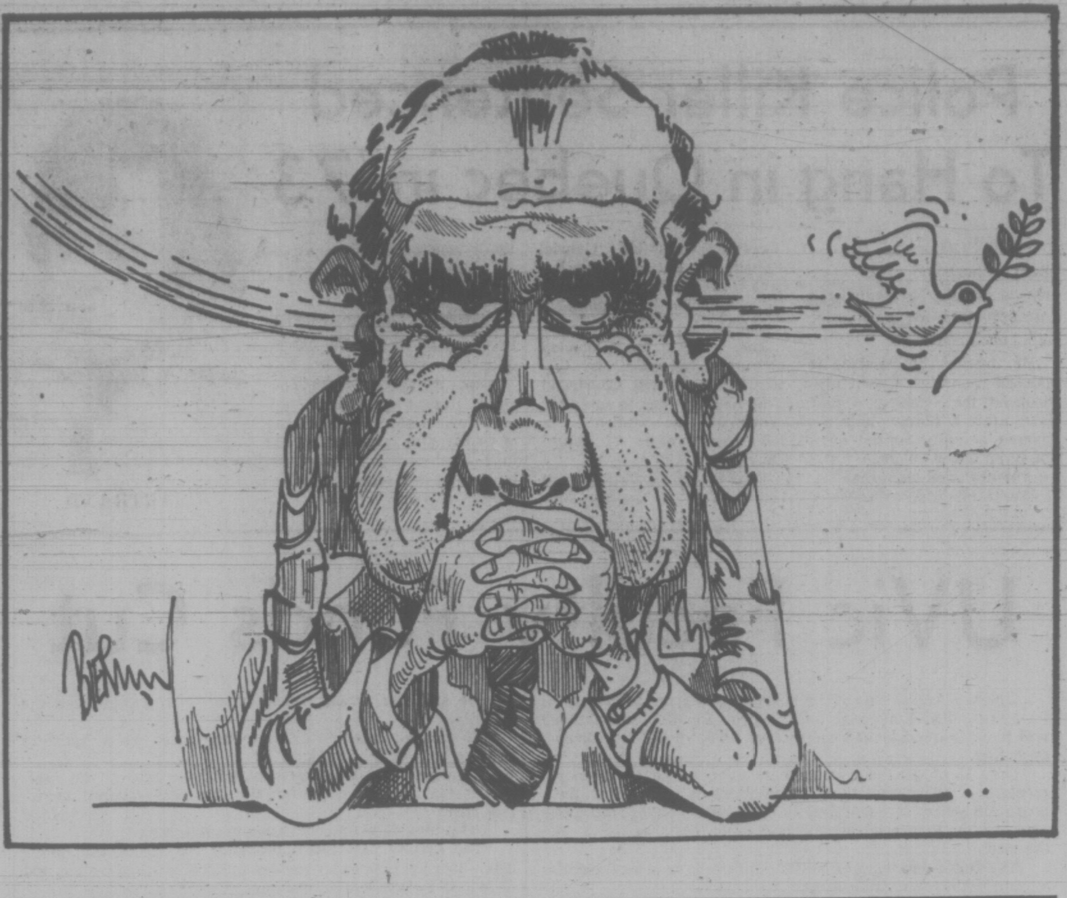
Mrs. Gandhi and the CIA

The role of the United States Central Intelligence Agency in Indian affairs is one of the topics drawing current interest in the subcontinent. It appears that the CIA is attracting the censure of the entire ruling Congress Party from Kashmir to Kerala and has even elicited the comment: "Americans are far more arrogant than the British ever were."

It is interesting, even amusing, that the CIA is being simultaneously blamed for right-wing demonstrations in the Punjab and for master-minding the pro-Chinese Communist party in West Bengal. When asked about the evidence for such allegations the prime minister, Mrs. Indira Gandhi, replied: "It is not up to us to prove it, but it is up to the CIA to disprove it."

In arguing that the United States wants to prevent India from fulfilling its destiny as a great power and is engineering a policy designed to provoke internal unrest, the fact may be overlooked that the U.S. has contributed more than $10 billion worth of aid to India in the last 20 years, "more than from all other countries put together," in the words of one observer.

While there may be truth in some of the allegations and while no amount of aid should excuse another country's political interference in domestic affairs, India should keep its sense of balance and not seek to use foreign spies as scapegoats. There is still room to employ thorough self-examination for failures in policy.



C. L. SULZBERGER

The Single European Voice

PARIS — The emphasis of U.S. foreign policy must inevitably shift back to Europe early in President Nixon's second term. There are three compelling reasons for this.

The newly enlarged Common Market is eager to adjust economic relationships with America and strong enough to insist on doing so. A European security conference including West and East, the United States and Russia, is scheduled to start soon. And NATO must plan goals and strategy on the basis of these developments plus the assumption that an all-volunteer U.S. Army will pare the American garrison on the continent.

It is necessary to arrange modalities for a changing trans-atlantic relationship. Now that the European Community has nine members, including Britain, and is strenghtening its commission, it hopes to speak as an equal and with a single voice in its dealings with Washington — not with nine separate voices in bilateral talks.

'Some Confusion'

However, neither the Community nor the United States is yet accustomed to this idea. Indeed, Nixon himself showed confusion in a message he sent on Oct. 28 after the Community's Paris summit.

In one sentence he noted it was "of the highest importance that the United States and Europe work closely together" and welcomed "the Community's declared intent to maintain a constructive forthcoming dialogue." But in another sentence he reaffirmed the U.S. commitment "to work with the members of the European Community."

The difference in phraseology — "Community" or "members" — is not regarded here as a minor matter of semantics. It involves a primordial decision: will Washington negotiate with the Common Market as an institution or with representatives of its nine component members?

The answer cannot be decided in Washington alone, the European Community must give sufficient authority to its recently invigorated commission to speak for an organization that represents the world's greatest trading power. And this still remains to be done.

Jean Monnet, the 84-year-old Frenchman who is the Community's grandfather, insists "it is essential that relations between the U.S.A. and Europe should be on a basis of equality; therefore Europe must speak as one. Of course the community doesn't have its own nuclear force as such; but on an economic and monetary basis it is certainly the equal of the United States — although its separate members are not."

For this reason the Community members must accustom themselves to negotiating as a unified bloc. Even then, Monnet feels, the problems to be settled between the European continent and the United States are so complex and difficult that they may easily take much more than four years of another presidential term to arrange.

He believes the best way to start is creating an organization representing the two as equals — the U.S.A. and the Community. This would maintain permanent contact and continual consultation between responsible American cabinet ministers and members of the European commission.

The dialogue would have to begin with the complex of monetary and economic questions. Only after they are resolved can the suggested organization move on to political and military matters. But serious differences on economic issues exist. Monnet thinks it is necessary to create a positive psychological atmosphere erasing all thoughts of superiority in the U.S.A. or of inferiority in Europe by establishing "true equality of approach."

Solution Through Unity

"The United States, with its great power, for a long time favored the construction of Europe," he says, "then, in the face of the hesitation of the European countries to unite together, more recently — especially in the matter of currencies — some people in the United States came to think that European union was an illusion. But they are beginning to recognize that the monetary problem can be settled only by united Europe dealing collectively with the United States."

For Monnet the habit of trans-Atlantic consultation on a basis of parity between Washington and "Europe" speaking as a unit can alone erase accumulated suspicions: for example the European view that America is "domineering" and the American view that Europe is "protectionist." He adds: "America must accept the idea of equality. But Europe must move from a state of division and inferiority to unity and equality."

Obviously this is going to take a long time but the first step is plain: Europe must name representatives empowered to negotiate for the Community and then propose the needed consultation. The results could ultimately provide the foundation for a new era in the West.

JAMES H. GRAY

Among Familiar Strangers

CALGARY — Of all the minor problems prickling the conscience of Albertans, none has been more vexing to civil libertarians than the Hutterite question.

The Hutterites are an obscure Protestant pacificist sect that fled Russia 50 years ago to escape persecution for some decidedly off-pattern beliefs. They live in communes, holding all property as a colony and none as individuals. Organized on identical lines with many Roman Catholic orders, a Hutterite colony is severely patriachal, with a head "boss" and a number of lesser "bosses" who run the grain growing, poultry raising, marketing, livestock operations. The men and women wear Amish type dress which makes them conspicuous wherever they go.

Twenty-five years ago, the Alberta government bowed to the combined pressure of small-town merchants and the farming communities in which the Hutterite colonies were located and by legislation severely restricted the rights of Hutterites to buy land and the rights of citizens to sell land to Hutterites. It also established a special board to police the regulations.

Less Onerous Act

Last week the Conservative government announced that it was about to repeal the Communal Property Act and replace it with a body of less onerous but still rather severe restrictions.

Nobody developed much animus toward the Hutterites in Alberta until midway into World War II. There were only a few thousand of them in a dozen colonies and aside from their queer garb they attracted little attention. Wartime conditions changed everything.

As conscientious objectors, the Hutterites were exempt from military service. The mass movement of prairie farm boys into the services left the farms short of labor while the Hutterites, with their large families, had labor to spare. Thus the Hutterites were able to expand their farm activities in all directions. And because they are such superb farmers they were able to profit substantially from wartime demand.

And because they claimed exemption as a religious order, they did not have to pay income taxes during the war. They had other advantages over their profane neighbors. They paid no wages, spent none of their income on such frills as books, magazines, radios, cars, fancy furniture, clothing. They regard school attendance laws as an abomination and never permit a child to stay in school any longer than the law requires.

If the sect had patronized local merchants the antagonism toward them might have been kept within bounds. Unhappily they never bought anything they could make, never bought retail when they could buy wholesale in the city, never bought wholesale when they could buy from the manufacturer. On top of everything else, they peddled their produce from door to door in direct competition with small town merchants.

Because they were superb farmers operating at minimal costs, the Hutterites were soon loaded with cash. When they used it to buy up neighboring farms there was such a clamor that the Socreds in 1942, 1945 and 1947 passed laws to restrict their expansion. Ultimately they could not buy land without the approval of a special board and in no case could the land be within 50 miles of an established colony.

Hutterite Communes

The effect of the legislation was to nudge the colonists into Saskatchewan and Manitoba. Yet the Hutterites' baby boom continued to make the need for additional colonies imperative.

Several years ago an expensively tedious lawsuit was set off when several landholders east of Calgary sold off their farms for inflated prices to individual Hutterites. The government stepped in to block the sales and succeeded in doing so in the courts.

There is little doubt that because they are different the Hutterites are distrusted and feared by many thousands of Albertans. Because they isolate themselves from community life, the farming communities are convinced they contribute nothing to either the community or the province. The common question is "Where would this province be if the Hutterites controlled all the land?" The answer most frequently supplied is: It would become a commune steeped in ignorance and superstition which could not survive.

The Hutterites are far from taking over the province, of course, though they double in numbers every 17 years. There are now 7,200 of them on 83 colonies. The colonies of around 100 adults and children have an average operating profit of $91,000. That would work out to around $5,000 a family, except that no member of any family ever gets his hand on the money. The colonies had gross sales of about $23,000,000 in 1971 and expenses of around $17,000,000.

The repeal of the Communal Property Act will not mean, however that the Hutterites will enjoy full civil rights in Alberta. They have seemingly agreed that they should restrict their colonies to 6,400 acres and not establish them closer than within 15 miles of each other.

Backlash Inevitable

While the lifting of the restrictions will appeal to defenders of civil liberties, there is no doubt there will be a backlash in the country with any proliferation of colonies. In recent years Hutterite land purchases have set neighbor against neighbor, sparked all kinds of community bitterness.

The Hutterites caused considerable resentment because they could pay cash for large tracts of farm land. In recent years as aging farmers have sold out and retired the sales have mainly been made to neighbors who were expanding their holdings to get more efficient operation. In many such cases, the seller had to take part cash and a much larger part of his payment in mortgage.

When the Hutterites came into the market they frequently offered more than the neighbors could pay, and offered it in cash. Farmers who sold to Hutterites were scorned by their friends who were not favored by Hutterite offers.

By reducing the space between colonies to 15 miles, there can be no doubt that the government will set forces in motion that will light flares of controversy wherever new colonies are established. And it will rage for as long as the Hutterites persist in maintaining a culture that is so alien to the Canadian scene.

Letter From a Reader

Working on the Railroad

Reading in your paper a news item regarding the E and N (Canadian Pacific) Rly. prompts this reply.

There is no doubt the railway has cleaned stations on the line, built a new one for the Victoria end (with City help), revised the schedule somewhat, and even spent the enormous sum of $2,000 on promotion! Not many passengers were carried, admittedly, but the true cost of operation and losses are open to question.

Now, perhaps just transporting people isn't the best potential use of this track, other than the freight traffic. But here come the arguments against even the remotest suggestion of alternatives: cost of equipment, personnel, scheduling, promotion cost, lack of facilities—all unimaginative babbling.

I don't have all the answers, but do know: (1) a small local railway, operated by people with some business sense, imagination, no money in the way of capital, carried twice the passengers estimated for the first season, with no prior promotion; (2) paid all costs of wages, fuel, and promotion from revenue — not bad for the first season of any seasonal business. (3) spent one fourth of the E and N expenditure for pamphlets and brochures alone — $2,000 doesn't go very far if a company intends to make a success of its endeavor.

The corporate thinkers of our mighty railways have a way of smothering reasonable plans before they can be studied properly; however, to show "it can be done," a quote from the Algoma Central Rly. annual report of 1971. "The results of the Agawa Canyon tour this year exceeded all expectations — 59 per cent more than the previous year." And "because of the interest shown in the Canyon excursion a Winter Wonderland Tour has been added for ten weekends in the first quarter of 1972. With the increased revenue from Agawa Canyon business the Company now has no plans to file a specific subsidy with respect to passenger train losses in place of the general subsidy now received."

This is from a small railway making best use of what it has at hand. Another example, Victoria Pacific Railway, speaks for itself with respect to "it can be done."

None of the above is an overnight success, but with a product to exploit, the right frame of mind and promotion, the end result can be very commendable — something for the E and N Rly., the Chambers of Commerce, and the Transport Commission to approach with an open mind toward success. — Kenneth L. Showers, 3850 Happy Valley Rd.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 21, 1912:

An exceptional number of box parties appear to have been arranged in connection with Saturday's performances at the Victoria theatre by Mr. Andreas Dippel's Chicago Grand Opera company of "The Secret of Suzanne," both for the matinee and for the evening repetition. The company is to arrive direct from San Francisco on Saturday morning and will make the Empress their home while here. Each performance will be introduced with a complete high class concert programme in which various artistes will take part, in addition to the thoroughly musicianly orchestra under Sig. Attilio Parelli.

The Jackals of Revenge in Full Cry Again

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
The Sun

"The mood and temper of the public with regard to the treatment of crime and criminals is one of the most unfailing tests of the civilization of any country."
—Winston Churchill, 1910

There is something savage to behold in the reaction to a rare and spectacularly-publicized failure in the attempt to treat criminals in a humane manner. It seems to tap a reactionary pulse that beats just beneath the surface. There is a lust for revenge, a chance to roll the clock back to the eye-for-an-eye, tooth-for-a-tooth era. I'm continually astounded at the mature people you run into who are susceptible.

The tale of Donald Campbell Anderson, the con man who bilked the taxpayer and walked away from the Canadian Penitentiary Service's Matsqui Institution, of course makes great reading. It's even better fodder for commentators seeking, and finding, the lowest common denominator. It supports all the old hobby-horses of the reactionary — the gullibility of the social worker, the stupidity of all bureaucrats, the childlike innocence of the parole officer, the utter futility of attempting to salvage human beings. Here we have proof incarnate. Donald Campbell Anderson is total evidence that the entire progressive movement of the Canadian penitentiary system be scrapped. Even better, be reversed. The woolhat licks his lips in anticipation.

What is conveniently ignored is that Donald Campbell Anderson is headline material because he is such a rare exception. In the last three years, there have been 24,866 "temporary absence permits" issued at Matsqui. That means 24,866 times when inmates have been allowed to go out into society for short periods — perhaps a few nours, perhaps a day or several days. In those three years there have been 10 incidents. That would seem not bad odds.

Matsqui is a medium security institution. That means the 300 inmates it contains are not considered a danger to the public. About half of them are drug addicts. The others are up for such things as false pretences, burglary—sleazy little crooks. In Donald Campbell Anderson, the system ran into a superior con man who, as the juicy evidence now portrays, probably could have conned his way out of any institution which must take some risks in the goal of attempting to rehabilitate rather than punish the men involved.

Donald Campbell Anderson managed to walk away with $3,850 from the Matsqui-Sumas-Abbotsford Community Services. The result is that the savage reactionaries, bent on revenge against a world they can't understand, are threatening to kill the whole concept of the MSA Community Services—which offers inmates a chance to get involved and do some penance outside prison walls.

I was having a fistfight yesterday with my friend Simma Holt over another matter on which we happen to disagree, but she was equally depressed over this gleeful pouncing on the farcical case of Donald Campbell Anderson. She told of visiting the medium and minimum security prisons up the Fraser Valley, where the enemies of reform always cite the fact of inmates lolling about on Sunday, necking with their girlfriends.

"I see them too," says Simma, "but for every one of them there are five or six others sitting there with their wives and their children climbing all over them. You can put them in cages like animals if you want. And you can guarantee they'll come out of prison like animals."

One of the authorities at Matsqui said yesterday, "You can take a man and lock him up. His problems don't manifest themselves there. It's just like raising children. You can keep them severely under your thumb — and their problems won't surface right then. They will later, of course. That's what these guys are like — children. The temporary absence permits give them a chance to develop some work habits. It gives them a chance to make some friends away from the delinquent world."

Last Christmas, 100 men at Matsqui were allowed out to visit families, friends or whatever an inmate seeks at Christmas. That's a third of the inmate population. There wasn't a defector. At New Year's, it was the same percentage, with the same results. Now, because of the clamor over Donald Campbell Anderson, and the pressure, there has been a cutback in temporary absence permits. The only men being allowed out are a restricted few.

There are several men, who have succeeded on passes so well that they are supporting their families and have taken those families off welfare, who will now be curbed. There are several others, doing voluntary work in social services outside the prison, who will be called back. The pressure is too heavy. The progressive movement of the Canadian prison system will move inexorably forward, but it will be stalled temporarily locally because of the jackals now in full cry.

When he made that speech to the British House of Commons more than a half-century ago, Churchill said:

"A calm, dispassionate recognition of the rights of the accused, and even of the convicted criminal against the state; a constant heartsearching by all charged with the duty of punishment; desire and an eagerness to rehabilitate in the world of industry those who have paid their due in the hard coinage of punishment; tireless efforts toward the discovery of curative and regenerative processes; unfailing faith that there is treasure, if you can only find it, in the heart of every man.

"These are the symbols which, in the treatment of crime and criminal, mark and measure the stored up strength of a nation and are a sign of proof of the living virtue in it."

The saddest aspect of the Donald Campbell Anderson case is that it is being milked for all it's worth because this happens to be ratings week on local radio. Cynical is too kind a word to use for those who exploit the reactionary pulse for commercial considerations.

Graft, Corruption 'Normal' In Public Life of India

By SUNANDA DATTA-RAY
The London Observer

CALCUTTA — In a novel attempt to halt the rampant corruption which riddles India's public life, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi recently demanded that people who abused their trust should be "socially boycotted".

The plea is no more likely to be taken seriously than an earlier West Bengal Ministerial resolution to reject hospitality from income-tax dodgers. If it were, many of the country's most influential politicians, civil servants and business tycoons might be refused service in restaurants and hotels, denied admission to clubs, and ostracised at cocktail parties. Indeed, social life would probably pack up altogether — so widespread are graft and nepotism at all levels of the political and bureaucratic hierarchies.

But the situation, though it causes Mrs. Gandhi considerable anxiety, is not new. The roots of what is a way of life, rather than an aberration, reach into a psyche that was explained in the third century B.C. by a canny Brahmin statesman and administrator, Kautilya, who wrote in the Arthasastra — a classic tome on Sanskrit policy — that it is as impossible for an official not to abuse his power as it is for a man with honey on his tongue not to taste of its sweetness.

Parkinson's Law

What the astute Kautilya probably did not foresee was that a proliferation of government offices and an increasing number of economic controls and licensing procedures would evolve a kind of Parkinson's Law of corruption. The greater the number of restrictive regulations, the more widespread is their organised evasion.

According to the director of India's Central Bureau of Investigation, which is responsible for tracking down bureaucratic malpractices, official venality costs the exchequer thousands of millions of rupees every year. What has caused greater dismay, however, is the recent authoritative suggestion that corruption is not only the norm, but that is is almost impossible eradicate.

This is the dismal message of a 90-page report by Subimal Dutt, now India's High Commissioner in Dacca, who was formerly Central Vigilance Commissioner in New Delhi, a post which was created eight years ago to enforce standards of integrity.

He complains that the public does not differentiate between money that is honestly and dishonestly earned; that corruption is "fairly widespread among public servants"; and that those who enjoy "the right kind of backing", especially political patronage, are exonerated of charges supported by irrefutable evidence.

GANDHI
. . . worried

Dutt writes with the measured circumspection expected of an elderly, British-trained civil servant. But those who need ration cards, driving licences, industrial permits or building permission know to their cost that the majority of officials are at best lazy and inefficient; at the worst, they will perform their normal duties only for a consideration which is nowadays euphemistically described as "speed money".

The term may be new, but the practice has existed as long as it has laid in the power of an individual to grant a petition.

While Mrs. Gandhi is worried about the effect of this deteriorating morality on public confidence, Dutt frankly admits that his office has barely touched the fringes of the problem. Remedial measures were proposed 10 years ago and a Committee on the Prevention of Corruption set up: its recommendation for a chain of vigilance commissioners in New Delhi and the states was accepted, but the government flatly rejected the second part of the report which would have put effective teeth into the anti-corruption machinery. This suggested that ministers should also be subjected to vigilance, and that the commissioners should be empowered to initiate and conduct probes, call for evidence, and decide on punishment. They now enjoy only an advisory role.

Even this is vanishing. Vigilance commissions in Bihar, Uttar Pradesh and the Punjab are almost moribund.

Relief Food Sold

The much-publicised misappropriation of relief material meant for Bangladesh refugees is one result of this chaos. But, again, this is by no means new. Funds earmarked for East Pakistan refugees in 1947 found their way into other pockets; in one notorious case, a prominent civil servant was successfully prosecuted for defalcating compensation money for Indian evacuees from Burma; and blankets and tinned food sent from the United States for Tibetan refugees were openly sold in the bazaars of Kalimpong and Darjeeling in the sixties.

The range of abuses is wide: from the daily $40 of toll money which is swindled (according to Dutt) through a tortuously ingenious method from a Ganges bridge on the outskirts of Calcutta, to the import licences valued at over $300,000 which were granted to 24 non-existent factories in Tamil Nadu. Farmers in the Punjab and Haryana readily pay high premiums for imported tractors; Bombay's millionaire film stars are usually signed on for about half the amount which they actually receive; and teenage boys who are responsible for collecting parking fees in Calcutta streets will happily reduce the charge if the motorist does not insist on a receipt.

Policemen Bribed

The spectacular and prolonged chase across half the globe to Costa Rica, arrest in London, and conviction in New Delhi of a fraudulent shipping magnate, Dr. Jayanti Dharam Teja, who was recently sentenced to three years' rigorous punishment and fined nearly $200,000, does not prove anything. A cleaner administration demands probity at all levels: from humble policemen who will now let off traffic offenders on payment of a small bribe to senior ministers who are often suspected of farming out government contracts to friends and family.

A bill which has been hanging fire for at least three years might enable stricter control all round, but New Delhi is not, apparently, in any great hurry to see it entered into the statute book. Nor does the government see anything sinister in the fact that the number of senior officials charged with malpractices increased from 353 in 1967 to 541 last year. In this all-pervasive atmosphere of moral turpitude there is a certain honour among thieves: a vigilance commissioner's efforts are usually frustrated because the guilty can expect protection from their departmental superiors.

Several cases are cited in which allegations against an individual have been forwarded to his boss with the necessary request for evidence and witnesses. Such requests are often ignored and even proven cases glossed over; the old boy network is too strong and intricate to permit an individual member to be penalised for what everybody else does.

'GET RID OF HANGMAN FOREVER'

THE TORONTO STAR

On any January morning next year, it is possible that a civil servant called John Ellis will pull a lever and spring a trapdoor to break the neck of a murderer on the end of a rope.

No one has performed such an act of retaliatory killing in Canada since 1962. And capital punishment — except for killing a policeman or a prison guard — was banned for a five-year period by an act of Parliament in 1967. That ban comes to an end on Dec. 29 this year and unless Parliament decides to extend the temporary ban or eliminate capital punishment permanently, hangings can begin again.

The Star believes it is Parliament's duty to abolish capital punishment entirely and forever not only because it is ineffective in deterring other killers but because state-sanctioned homicide is unworthy of any civilized country.

At the same time, it is clear that the public is uneasy about the growing scale of violence in Canada and there must be no compromise with the long-term protection of society from murderers and criminal psychopaths.

Leniency has not proved popular. Conservative Party Leader Robert Stanfield says the commuting of death sentences makes a farce of the law. Last February, the Gallup Poll showed 63 per cent of Canadians wanting capital punishment restored. The Commons voted 114 to 87 in favor of temporary abolition in 1967, but must now take account of hostile public opinion.

The Canadian Police Association has suggested there be a referendum on the issue. In California, 69 per cent voted on Tuesday to restore the death penalty, which both the California and the United States Supreme Courts had declared to be cruel and unconstitutional punishment.

Public opinion in favor of the restoration of the death penalty no doubt reflects the substantial increase in the number of murders in Canada. In 1967, the last year when the old hanging law was in force, there were 281 murders reported. By 1970, the figure had risen to a record 430; in 1971 it was down slightly to 426.

The supporters of capital punishment argue this is a simple case of cause and effect — no threat of hanging, therefore more murders. This is difficult to establish, particularly when such a large proporation of murders were so-called crimes of passion, committed on impulse. And many others resulted from drunken brawls.

In the parliamentary debate to come, we will hear once again the confusing collection of statistics designed to prove that capital punishment does — or does not — deter potential killers. The best that can be said is the case for deterrence is "not proven."

But if this barbarous act of ceremonial state killing is to be eliminated forever, there must be assurance from Parliament that a certain type of criminal — the gun-toting thug, psychopathic sex killers, the premeditated murderer — are not let loose on the public again. Parole arrangments that are too slack are a menace to public safety and stoke the fires of revenge.

With the Criminal Code changed to make life imprisonment reflect more closely what the words say, then Parliament should be able to muster its courage and range Canada alongside the majority of Western countries who have eliminated capital punishment entirely.

Fruit of the Money Tree

By JOHN NICHOL

Have you heard about the money trees? Do you know how they grow? Do you know what they produce? Do you know who gets the magic golden coconuts? Do you know who gets the husks after the coconuts are gone? If you don't understand the money trees, my friend, you don't understand the system.

Let us take a typical Canadian corporation. By this I mean a company with its stock ownership in New York, it's head office skyscraper in Toronto, and both its resources and its labor in western Canada. It is called, let's say, Profitless Forest Products Limited. Let us see who lives off the fruit of this particular money tree.

The directors and the management get their salaries, their private clubs, and the use of company aircraft. The company buys their carpets, curtains and booze and pays for their entertainment. After their cardiac arrests, they get pensions.

The labor unions are strong. They put the arm on the company — just like management. They shake the money tree, and the coconuts come down. The union leaders and the management may sit on different branches, but they are in the same tree.

The suppliers of goods to Profitless Forest Products do well. They sell everything from paperclips and instant coffee to super crawler, front loading, half track, dump trucks to good old Profitless. They know how the money tree grows.

So does the government. It takes income tax, property tax, and royalties away from good old Profitless and uses the funds to grow its own money tree over in another corner of the garden. But more of that later.

The investment community get their coconuts by shifting investors from Profitless Forest Products to Canadian Red Ink Industries Limited — and back. The banks drain off their interest charges like sweet sap from a spring maple.

And that leaves the shareholder. What does he get? He gets a return which over the years will prove after inflation to have been microscopically more profitable than leaving his money in the mattress, and considerably less safe. He gets the husks.

But do you see that huge money tree over there . . . that's the government money tree. It towers over the corporate and union money trees . . . look at those coconuts. Who gets those?

Let us begin. The list is much the same — only longer. Management, labor, suppliers, bankers, artists, civil servants, consultants, ad-men, politicians, hippies, doctors, lawyers and Indian Chiefs are living by the millions in these government money trees. The trees keep growing bigger because all of these people have a vested interest in seeing bigger and fatter coconuts.

And in this case its the taxpayer who gets the husks. He is to the government tree, what the shareholder is to the corporate tree. He is told that he can, through the democratic process, control how his money is spent. Similarly, the shareholder is supposed to exercise the ultimate power in the corporation. Both these propositions are provable hogwash.

There is a moral to all this, but unfortunately it is an immoral one. Neither a shareholder nor a taxpayer be. Find a money tree. And remember — only a fool would let himself become too old, or too sick, or too weak, to hang on to the branch.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

Good exporter and commercial buying pushed the rapeseed prices about four cents above previous close levels by mid-session today. Heavy trading near the close moved the prices continually higher with three months reaching the 10-cent maximum trading limit.

Flax also had fairly good trading but gains somewhat easier than rapeseed.

Oats, barley and rye had mainly a routine trade with prices generally steady.

CHICAGO (AP) — A strong demand for soybean meal and oil futures created a buying move that resulted in a gain of more than 6 cents a bushel in soybean futures on the Board of Trade.

Soybean meal gained $1 a ton and soybean oil moved up 25 points. Corn futures advanced a cent but wheat futures were irregular. Oats gained a cent.

Strong factors in the buying of commodities in the soybean group were bad weather and export demand for meal and oil. prices of the end-products were firm to strong at the cash level.

Craigmont Mines Ltd., which operates a copper mine near Merritt, reports lower net earnings of $2.5 million for the nine months ended Oct. 31, compared with $2.9 million in the same period last year.

Per-share earnings during the first three quarters of 1972 were 49 cents, compared with 58 cents last year.

A statement released by the company said it achieved higher production in the mine and the concentrator mill, but lower copper prices and increased production costs, as well as shipping delays caused by a dock strike, resulted in reduced earnings.

Fourth-quarter dividend of 25 cents per share has been reduced to 15 cents.

Real Estate Commissions On MLS Sales Changed

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Whether Multiple Listing Service commission rates have gone down or up in Victoria depends upon how much you get for your house.

The key number is $26,667.

Houses sold below that price will have a reduced real estate commission while those above will have a higher commission.

The new rates are effective immediately.

Victoria Real Estate Board vice-president J. A. Betts said the new MLS commissions will be 6.5 per cent on the first $30,000 of a sale, 6 per cent on the balance up to $100,000 and 3 per cent on that portion of the sale above $100,000.

He said the former rates were 7 per cent on the first $20,000, 5 per cent on the balance up to $100,000 and 2.5 per cent on the portion of the sale above $100,000.

The effect of the new rates is to reduce the commission rate on sales of $20,000 or less — if the house sells for exactly $20,000 the commission is reduced $100.

Expensive homes will carry big increases in commissions — $450 more on a $70,000 house and $850 more on a home selling for $120,000.

Selling price	Old rates	New rates	Changes
$15,000	$1,050	$975	— $75
20,000	1,400	1,300	— 100
26,000	1,700	1,690	— 10
27,000	1,750	1,755	+ 5
29,000	1,850	1,885	+ 35
30,000	1,900	1,950	+ 50
35,000	2,150	2,250	+ 100
45,000	2,650	2,850	+ 200
70,000	3,900	4,350	+ 450
120,000	5,900	6,750	+ 850

With the introduction of the new MLS schedule, the real estate board also recommended that agents stabilize the commission rates on exclusive listings at 6 per cent. At present the rate for exclusive listings fluctuates between 5 per cent and 10 per cent.

(Footnote: the purist will have noted that at $26,667 the commission rate is half a cent higher on the new schedule. The point of equilibrium is actually $26,666 and change but house prices are seldom quoted in pennies. At $26,666 even, the old commission is a full penny lower than the new rate.)

WAC Praises Skagit Decision

Opposition Leader W. A. C. Bennett said Monday he is happy with the announcement over the weekend by Resources Minister Bob Williams that B.C. will not allow further flooding of the Skagit Valley by the raising of the Ross Dam.

Bennett denied he had called the decision "stupid," as reported in several newspapers, saying what he considers "stupid" is the inference that his Social Credit party is responsible for the Skagit problem, not the agreement itself or NDP government's position on the agreement.

Bennett said the agreement with Seattle City Light Co., governing the height of the Ross Dam in the United States, was negotiated by the provincial Liberal government in 1952. The federal Liberal party was also in power at that time, the former premier said.

"These national agreements are all on that basis," Bennett said. "We did not originate any agreements with Seattle or anybody else. We fell heir to it."

Asked his opinion of the Skagit agreement, Bennett skirted the issue, saying: "I'm not a lawyer and not an engineer. This is something we inherited."

"Social Credit never repudiated any agreements," he said. "neither should the NDP repudiate any agreement. If they want to take it before the court, and contest it, that's another matter."

The effect of the raising of the Ross Dam would be to flood the Skagit Valley, including part of it on British Columbia soil.

Williams announced Friday B.C. will not allow the valley to be flooded. It is the first indication of the NDP government's position on the Skagit situation since it took office from the Socreds.

Bennett took the opportunity at his Monday press conference to lambaste statements made by NDP cabinet-ministers on alleged overspending by the Social Credit administration.

He particularly aimed at Highways Minister Robert Strachan's announcement last week that overspending in the highways department amounts to $38 million this year, which Strachan said just happens to have been an election year.

Bennett said there had been an overspending in the previous year as well, amounting to more than $26 million, and said Strachan's charges are "nothing more than reading a financial statement in a large way."

"When the summers are good, and you let these (highways) contracts," Bennett said, "you're never sure how great the overexpenditure is going to be," He said that is why Social Credit always brought in an additional part of the budget each year to approve the overexpenditure.

Bennett called the Strachan charges "a red herring to take away from this type of pork-barrel patronage they have established already in the few months they've been in office."

The Socred leader said with the good weather throughout this summer and into the fall, "naturally there are going to be overexpenditures. But there's lots of money there for that purpose."

Shot at RCMP Nets Man 5 Years

NANAIMO (CP) — John Stanley Puff, 28, was convicted of attempted murder Monday in the wounding of an RCMP constable last June 6 and sentenced to five years' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Richard Anderson in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Constable Don Grudgfield was shot in the hip with a shotgun as Puff walked up to the front counter in the Nanaimo RCMP office. Puff testified that he meant to shoot another officer who had earlier charged him with impaired driving.

He apologized to Constable Grudgfield.

Dr. J. P. Duffy, a practising psychologist from Vancouver, told the court that Puff was sane at the time of the shooting. The doctor testified that Puff was capable of knowing the difference between right and wrong, and was able to form the intent to kill.

He added that he believed Puff to be suffering a personality disorder, manifested mainly in his background. Dr. Duffy said Puff has a history of several suicide attempts. He felt the attack on the policeman had originated with a suicide attempt but that Puff's aggressiveness had been deflected in the officer's direction during a period of high stress.

JAYCEES JOIN TO SPONSOR SOAP BOXES

Victoria and Saanich Peninsula Jaycees announced Monday they will join forces to cosponsor the 1973 Vancouver Island Soap Box Derby.

The derby, to be held Sunday, May 27, as part of Victorian Days, is open to all boys and girls from 11 to 15 years of age residing on Vancouver Island.

Entry forms may be obtained to at the following locations: Jaycee Office, 207 Government, Cornell Chevrolet, on Douglas, or The General Store, at the Hillside Shopping Mall.

Protection Planned For Little Parks

Municipal administrator E. H. Hart was instructed Monday night to draw up a bylaw for Oak Bay council's Dec. 4 meeting covering dedication of parklands of less than one acre.

The decision came after Ald. Shirley Dowell asked what had been done to ensure that existing but undedicated park areas would be protected.

Hart told council that, under the Municipal Act, a referendum was required for dedication of parklands more than an acre in size.

Ald. Dowell pointed out that such a referendum would be needed to include Fireman's Park on Monterey, Henderson Park and the Oak Bay Marina.

Ald. John Goult observed, "It would appear there is no way this matter can be resolved prior to the December election. But it should be all bound and ready to go and put to the people at the earliest possible moment."

Inmate Still at Large

A Prince George man is still at large after failing to return on schedule to the William Head minimum security prison Sunday.

David Murphy, 32, was serving two years and 15 days for theft under $50 and driving without insurance, left the institution Friday and did not return on time Sunday night.

A second man who also failed to return Sunday will be brought back from Vancouver under police escort Wednesday. The inmate's car had broken down on the weekend, leaving him unable to return to the island, he explained to institution officials by phone.

McKINNON QUITS SCHOOL BOARD FOR OTTAWA

McKINNON
.... conflicting roles

He said he had found during the last few weeks that it was impossible for a part-time chairman to provide leadership.

At the same time, he said, he made it impossible for anyone else on the board to provide leadership.

McKinnon was elected Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Victoria in the Oct. 30 federal election. He took a holiday after his election.

Shortly after his return from holiday, he was called to a party caucus meeting in Ottawa. His appearance Monday was his first session with the board since the election.

An elementary schoolteacher in Sooke, McKinnon was a school trustee two years and chairman two years.

Ten Hopefuls Spell Platform In James Bay

Jousting for four available seats on Victoria city council in the Dec. 9 municipal election, 10 aldermanic candidates made their pitches to the James Bay Community Association Monday, concentrating on zoning and land use.

Malcolm Anderson, city stockbroker and a Saanich resident, said he is not opposed to "development as such" in Victoria, because it helps to pay the way. Controlled development can keep home taxes down.

Sam Bawlf, a developer who says he doesn't like that word, is seeking a council seat because "Victoria is not making rapid enough progress in its plans."

Realtor Henry Bitterman, who failed in his 1971 bid for a city council seat, is seeking election because he knows the city. He's been a realtor for 17 years in Victoria and believes he has something to offer it.

Tom Christie, one of the three sitting aldermen seeking re-election, stood on his rcord as chairman of the finance committee. He said the 1972 budget presented an increase of one-half-mill in municipal taxes — an accomplishment, he said, which would be difficult to match.

Robert Ellis, making his fifth bid for a chair in the council chambers, stressed his personal qualifications. He is a business office manager (Credit Bureau), a vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Better Business Bureau.

Sitting alderman Percy Frampton avowed that he is opposed to a proposed extension of Michigan St. which would cut through Beacon Hill Park.

Joyce Heynsbroek, housewife, declined to campaign on either herself or issues. Instead, she said, she'd talk about her own feelings. "We must shape our cities to suit our needs or our cities will shape us," she warned. "A city is only as good as the little people in it." Mrs. Heynsbroek advocated leases to industry and shorter leases to individuals.

Ald. Alf Hood stood on his record as a member of the present city council. He said he was responsible for establishment of the Landlord-Tenant Advisory Bureau and came out against a plan, prepared five years ago, for development of land and traffic facilities in the James Bay area.

Mrs. Christine Richards, who went on the recent tour of European cities conducted by Mayor Peter Pollen, said she was "appalled at the present conditions of James Bay."

Joe Richards, a Victoria West resident seeking election to both the school board and city council on a platform of instituting the ward system in Victoria, opened on the offensive.

"I noticed I've been a thorn in the side of council in regarding Victoria West," he claimed. He charged that the "City of Victoria is being run by big business."

PRIEST FIRED FOR LIVING WITH GIRL

TOULOUSE, France (UPI) Six priests here resigned from their churches because their archbishop fired another priest for living with a girl, church officials said.

Archibishop Monsignor Guyot Retired Father Bernard Forestier from his post because "he is living in free union" with a young girl.

Forestier's six colleagues Sunday announced their resignation because "in our eyes, the situation ... is symptomatic of the persons who currently reign in the church."

Foul Bay Centre Squelched

With a unanimous show of strength Oak Bay council moved Monday night to squelch the building of a controversial shopping centre on Foul Bay.

Monday night the council moved that zoning be changed to zone D apartments (four storeys). The matter now goes to public hearing Dec. 4.

The Oak Bay council of 1969 had approved construction of a one-storey building of 30,000 square feet, containing a grocery store, bank and drug store.

Mayor Frances Elford was an alderman at that time, under mayor Fred Hawes.

She said nothing Monday night when Ald. Shirley Dowell, speaking in favor of the zoning change, reminded her that she had voted in favor of the shopping complex on April 30, 1969.

Mrs. Elford, in 1969, said she had voted for the shopping complex because it would not contain specialty stores that would be a threat to stores in other parts of Oak Bay.

Ald. John Goult said "The majority of council do not want to see this as a shopping centre — geographically and physically it would be a disaster."

Yule Singing

Oak Bay council Monday night agreed to allow members of the Seventh-Day Adventist Church to sing carols and seek donations in the municipality.

Permission was given in the carollers to make their rounds between 6 and 9.30 p.m. on Dec. 2, 3, 9, 10 and 16.

Stop-Work

Contractors who flout Oak Bay bylaws will have stop-work orders slapped on until they comply.

Ald. Douglas McLelland said the move was necessary because of the increasing difficulty caused by road and sidewalk obstruction and other public nuisances.

Council agreed to the idea.

View Arena

Ald. Douglas Watts will represent Oak Bay in a Greater Victoria contingent going to Burnaby Friday to view a privately-owned arena complex.

The visit, arranged by Saanich council and open to others who are interested, is to view Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd.'s new facility, opening in early December.

Southern College Probe Set

BATON ROUGE, La. (CP) — Attorney-General William Guste of Louisiana appointed a 12-member commission Monday to investigate the turmoil at Southern University that led to the deaths of two students.

Among those appointed to the commission were Revius Ortique, a black New Orleans lawyer and former member of the president's commission on campus unrest, and Turner Catledge, retired executive editor of the New York Times and a New Orleans resident.

Guste also named three other black officials and two students from Southern's New Orleans campus to the commission of inquiry.

Guste told a news conference the commission will begin its investigation Nov. 27.

Student Revolt Persists

REGINA (CP) — About 100 students occupying the offices of two University of Saskatchewan deans plan to present their recommendations to the student body Wednesday.

They made their decision Monday after learning Dr. John Archer, principal of the Regina campus of the university, had rejected a student request for equal representation with faculty on all University of Saskatchewan boards.

The decision, reached after weekend consultations between Dr. Archer and the university solicitor, supported a ruling made last week by Dean Edgar Vaughn of the arts and science faculty.

It was Dean Vaughn's ruling that to permit equal representation on university boards was against the provisions of the University Act in addition to a decision not to rehire three professors next year that prompted about 50 students to occupy the dean's office.

The students union demanded that Dr. Archer rescind Dean Vaughns ruling and the campus principal replied he would have to consult with the university solicitor.

TAKE SECOND OFFICE

When no word was received from the principal's office Monday afternoon, about 65 students occupied the office of the dean of graduate studies, Allan Van Cleave.

Ron Ware, university information officer, said the subsequent closing of all university offices and the book store was a safety measure to prevent possible damage to property.

In making his decision, Dr. Archer said he supported the concept of student consultation with department chairman, but anything more would contravene the University Act.

Students attend the university to acquire an education, he said, no tto run it. Avenues had been opened to students to influence university decisions, but they were not being used.

Red Oilmen Due

EDMONTON (CP) — Representatives of the Russian oil industry are expected to attend the 24th annual technical meeting of the Petroleum Society of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy here next May 8-12.

At least four technical papers will be presented by the Russians and a number of Russian diplomats are expected to attend the meeting, the society says in a news release.

Press Council Urged

REGINA (CP) — Attorney-General Roy Romanow says he may seek cabinet support for legislation to establish press councils in Saskatchewan "if nothing happens voluntarily."

Romanow, who said two months ago press councils should be organized in the province, said in a recent interview he would prefer to see the media implement the councils. But if owners and publishers failed to support the idea and the need persists, the government would have a responsibility to step in.

" . . . I predict nothing will happen voluntarily."

Servants Eye CLC

CALGARY (CP) — The Civil Service Association of Alberta has decided to join the Canadian Labor Congress, a move hailed by a labor spokesman as the first step in a nationa-wide movement.

About 200 delegates at the association's annual convention here told their executive "to take the necessary steps to affiliate" with the CLC, after defeating a motion to hold a membership referendum on the question.

Artists Confer

CALGARY (CP) — Artists are angry because they resent being treated as inferior citizens, says Prof. Paul Schafer of York University in Toronto.

"Artists can't pursue the things they want to do or find employment or funds, or gain representation on arts boards."

Addressing delegates Sunday night at the Canada West conference of the arts, Prof. Schafer said this is the first conference in Canada that has placed "in the forefront the problems of artists as working individuals."

Towboat Officers Settle

VANCOUVER (CP) — Terms for a proposed three-year contract have been agreed upon by negotiating committees for the Canadian Merchant Service Guild and the Towboat Industrial Relations Association of British Columbia, covering 850 masters, mates and engineers employed by 23 towboat firms.

A joint announcement Monday by Captain Arnie Davis, Service Guild secretary-treasurer, and Ed Peck, president of TIRA, said details of the agreement would not be made public until presented for approval to members of the guild and the firms represented by TIRA.

The joint spokesmen described the contract as a progressive one, representing the resolution of more than 100 union and management proposals.

It includes an improved leave system and a dental care plan. Agreement in principle has been reached on a program for noise suppression on towboats.

Tot 'Chipper'

VERNON (CP) — The parents of two-year-old Jenelle Goudge, who was missing two days in bush country near here, said their small daughter was "chipper" on her release from hospital Monday.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Goudge disappeared Thursday from a car parked in front of her home at Tillicum Valley. Volunteer searcher Omar DeRco found the child soaking wet and dirty after spending two nights in the open. The temperature fell to about 25 degrees both nights.

Bail Denied

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four persons charged with conspiring to traffic in the drug methampetamine, a form of speed, were remanded with0ut bail to Wednesday.

Huge Volcano

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nix Olympica is the name given a huge volcano on mars 375 miles across and 14½ miles high, photographed by the Mariner 9 space probe last year, space scientists Dr. Michael H. Carr of the United States geological survey told a martian seminar Monday. This is three times larger than the largest volcano on earth, he said. Another surprise discovery was a canyon hundreds of miles wide and more than 3,000 miles long.

Worst Driver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judge Harvey Sedgewick described Ignac Horvatek, 37, of Richmond as the worst driver he had come across when he sentenced him to a year imprisonment on three charges of impaired driving. He pleaded guilty to driving impaired on Sept. 13, Sept. 27 and on Nov. 1. Breathalyzer readings on the first two occasions showed him to have a blood-alcohol content of .17 and .21 per cent, respectively. Legal impairment is .08 per cent. The third time he refused to take a test. His driver's licence was suspended for nine years.

Service Might Have Saved Ernie

The Refrigeration Service Engineers' Society has offered to defuse potential death traps created by abandoned refrigerators, but few, if any, have made use of the offer.

Fritz Hagedorn, vice-president of the society, offered the information after nine-year-old Ernie Whitcomb was found dead in a refrigerator Monday.

"In an air-tight fridge, a child will suffocate in 15 to 30 minutes," said Hagedorn. "The society has offered to remove doors from abandoned refrigerators free of charge. We've offered this as a public service for several years now, but I don't think anyone has ever used it."

The boy's body was discovered in the back yard of the Roy Kirby residence at 1138 Lockley by Peter Harrington, of 1139 Lockley.

Approximately 50 men combed acres of woodland in the Gorge - Esquimalt area after Ernie wandered from his home at 1201 Colville about 5 p.m., Sunday.

The search was hampered by Ernie's inability to speak.

He attended George Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, said Hector Whitcomb, the boy's father.

The Kirby residence had been empty for the weekend and Mrs. Mildred Flack, of 1142 Lockley, returned home about 5:30 p.m. Sunday and noticed the refrigerator lying on its back where it had been standing upright since September, police said.

She called Harrington Monday and asked if he would investigate. He found the body at 1:30 p.m.

Saanich alderman William Noel called for legislation Monday which would prevent refrigerators from becoming deathtraps for children.

"There should be legislation making unlawful the abandonment of refrigerators," said Ald. Noel.

Municipal solicitor Douglas Patterson said the matter would come under the jurisdiction of the provincial legislature.

Oil Firms Sign Agreement To Help Protect Harbor

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

After two years of negotiation oil companies on the Inner Harbor have signed an agreement with the City of Victoria to provide better fire protection and minimize oil spills in the area.

Victoria Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said today "the contract has been signed and accepted by the companies and the city."

Fire protection in the area has been "adequate" in past years but now the oil company sites will have the most modern equipment on the market, said Coates.

The companies involved, Imperial Oil on the west side of the harbor, Gulf Oil and Shell Oil on the north, Texaco on the south, and Standard Oil with two sites, one on the north and one on the south, have agreed to subsidize Victoria Fire Department to purchase the "most modern" fire extinguishing equipment available, Coates said.

The equipment consists of a "mobile foam proportioning system and monitor nozzles. It's a trailer unit," said Coates.

"It requires no more than the normal complement and truck and is capable of dealing with fires at storage tanks, tank yards, wharves, tank trucks, and any fires requiring foam extinguishing equipment," he said.

"The tank holds 500 gallons of aero-O-foam, a liquid foam concentrate, and pumps out 4,000 gallons of foam per minute. It can reach 180 feet from the nozzle," said Coates.

Better Than Fixed System

The trailer unit and 200 gallons of "stand-by stock" will be kept at Victoria fire department.

The trailer also has a "demountable monitor nozzle for use in areas where the truck can't go. The mobile equipment is more effective than any fixed system," said Coates.

The unit is worth $24,000 and the balance of money will be used to purchase the foam concentrate at $11.90 a gallon.

In addition to the extinguishing equipment, the oil companies have bought 1,600 feet of "oil fence boom," made of nylon weighted logs.

Each log is 100 feet long and two feet high. The underside of each log is weighted to keep it "half submerged" barring off any possible escape routes for oil spilled in the harbor, said Coates.

The logs are located at the Shell Oil wharf where they can be easily towed by boat to any part of the harbor.

Another contract provision is the upgrading of firefighting equipment on the actual sites to "current standards," said Coates.

A fire hose and dry chemical extinguisher will be placed at each loading bay.

At each truck loading rack "shut-off valves" will be operated by remote control. Thermal-detector switches or heat-sensing devices shut down the pumping system and activate the remote-controlled shut-off valve.

As another contract condition, the fire department will "provide training in flammable liquid firefighting for tank farm personnel," said Coates.

Victoria Beauty Defends Contests

It's Miss, Not Ms. Canada

Beauty contests don't degrade women, nor are they in opposition to women's liberation, Victoria's Gillian Regehr said today from Toronto where she was crowned Miss Canada Monday night.

"They don't degrade women at all," she said in a phone interview from Toronto, just hours after winning the national beauty crown.

"They bring women out," she added, "and it's not just based on beauty. It's based on femininity, personality, poise and intellect.

"It definitely doesn't mean we're sex symbols," she said. "Me, a sex symbol?"

The 18-year-old brunette won the Miss Canada pageant Monday night over 28 other aspirants from across the country.

The youngest and tallest contestant, she won over the panel of judges with a ballet interpretation of the love theme from Romeo and Juliet in the talent contest.

★

Miss Regehr admitted she held true to tradition and burst into tears of joy as she was crowned by last year's queen, Donna Sawicky of Kitchener.

"I was just so surprised," she said this morning shortly before appearing on a Toronto television show. "I never thought I'd be chosen.

"It was super — a beautiful evening.

"When people approached me to run for Miss Victoria I thought they were nuts," she said with a laugh, "but I thought about it for a long time and decided it couldn't hurt, so why not try."

A member of the Royal Acadamy of Dance, Miss Regehr recently graduated from Claremont Senior Secondary School and lives with her parents at 933 Falaise Crescent.

As 26th winner of the pageant, the five-foot, nine-inch beauty will receive $35,000 in prizes, including a $10,200 chinchilla coat, $5,200 in cash, a $1,200 scholarship, a snowmobile, grand piano, a car and wardrobe.

"I don't even know all the things I've won," she said.

"I've won a fashion award and a scholarship, I know, and I'll put the money in the bank to save it for modelling school."

Miss Regehr said she has "just mostly been dancing" at Wynne Shaw Dance Studio since she finished school, but hopes to do further study in the field of fashion and become a professional model.

She will move to Toronto next week, however, as a home base for her activities as Miss Canada.

First on her agenda will be a trip across Canada.

Other runners-up are Marilyn Smith, 18, of Vancouver, Lise Leclerc, 22, of Quebec City, and Patricia Mazurick, 21, of Toronto.

Miss Congeniality — chosen by her fellow competitors — is Alanna Payne of Nova Scotia.

Judged for the pageant, which was broken up into three parts: the evening gown, the bathing suit and the talent contests, were actor Gordon Pinsent, Robert Dubberley, general manager of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Edith Serei, a Montreal broadcaster, Pat Gwyer, a Toronto fashion consultant, and Arto Cavouk, a Toronto photographer.

Dailly to Check Improper Spending

The honeymoon between Mrs. Eileen Dailly and the school boards of British Columbia has undergone its first tiff.

The new NDP minister of education has learned that some school boards which received "emergent operating expenses" a few weeks after she took charge are abusing the privilege.

In a letter circulated to school boards Nov. 10 and received by Greater Victoria board Monday night, Mrs. Dailly says some districts given mooney for hiring more teachers have instead been spending the money on building repairs.

The minister says her department will "obtain detailed reporting" of how school boards have spent their shot-in-the-arm allowances.

Any school boards found to have used the money otherwise than it was supposed to be spent will find their approvals rescinded and financial assistance by the government cancelled, Mrs. Dailly says.

The minister, in proposing relaxation of restraints imposed on school boards by the Socred government, told the fall session of the legislature she had the greatest confidence in the wisdom of trustees up and down the province.

Exactly how much was granted to school districts under the emergency scheme was not immediately available.

Greater Victoria school board did not request any extra allowance.

The emergent operating expenses scheme was designed to help boards through the remainder of the calendar year 1972.

$12,000 For UVic

The University of Victoria will receive a $12,000 grant for a heart fitness survey.

The grant was part of more than $70,000 announced today by the federal health department for recreation and fitness groups.

Two YMCA projects in Montreal will receive about half the money. The Association des Scouts du Canada will receive $9,000 to develop scouting among French-speaking youngsters in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Rink Issue Warming Up

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Dec. 9 Vote Would Mean Defeat—Curtis

The Saanich mayor was replying to Alan Newberry who said late Monday inquiry into a privately-owned arena for this area is a side issue and should not be allowed to sidetrack the electorate from a referendum to borrow for a publicly-owned rink.

"Ald. Newberry is casting about for an election issue," Curtis said, referring to a visit arranged by Saanich to the Burnaby complex of Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd., now under construction.

The firm has exhanged information with Saanich council and administration on a non-committal, informal basis.

Saanich should confine its role with Columbian to cooperation without making the private developer a side issue, Newberry said.

The mayor and three aldermen, senior staff and representatives from adjoining municipalities plan to inspect the Burnaby project Friday afternoon.

"None of us are convinced that a private development in Saanich or elsewhere in Greater Victoria is viable," Curtis said.

"We've listened carefully to the people from Burnaby and now we're going to have a look at it."

Curtis, along with aldermen Edith Gunning, Frank Waring and William Campbell, opposed the presentation of a borrowing referendum "at the earliest opportunity" as favored by Newberry and the remaining four members of council.

Meanwhile, the time necessary to prepare and approve a borrowing bylaw has expired as far as the Dec. 9 election is concerned.

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said today there is sufficient time to draw up a referendum solely for an expression of opinion by the Saanich electorate, but not to seek capital funds.

"To put a referendum on Dec. 9 would ensure its defeat," Curtis said. "Is that what he wants?"

MANAGER RESIGNS FROM SYMPHONY

Resignation of Carl E. Simmons as manager of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra has been regretfully accepted, according to an announcement by symphony president John Di Castri.

The resignation will take effect Dec. 31.

Simmons was appointed to the post in July, 1972, with the understanding that he would be allowed an exploratory period of three months to assess the position.

There are no immediate plans for his replacement.

Whitbread Pitches in to Eliminate Academy Woes

After a 40-minute secret session with Oak Bay council Monday night senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has agreed to help Victoria Riding Academy officials rectify a health hazard situation.

Mayor Frances Elford said today Whitbread has promised to meet with academy managers, Don and Aileen Carley, and others:

"He will explain what must be done to eliminate the immediate problem before the next warm season."

Reporters covering the open council meeting that preceded the in-camera one with Whitbread rejected a bid by Ald. John Goult to allow them to sit in on the secret session, providing they didn't print any of the proceedings.

The reporters refused the bid on the grounds it would prevent them reporting on matters they might feel were of public interest.

Goult said today, "The reason I did it was because there has been a lot of comment both in the press and out of the press on the way the inspection was done and the report submitted. I wanted the press to know exactly what had been going on."

The secret meeting was called to consider the demands in Whitbread's report which he had written should be met by Feb. 28.

In the open session Ald. Shirley Dowell reiterated that no member of council had been aware of the inspection (carried out on Oct. 23, two days after the Carleys were hospitalized after a car accident) until they were presented with the report.

She said that after she knew of the report she had phoned Whitbread and been told he had made the inspection on the request of council. The request, she said, was supposed to have come from municipal-administrator E. H. Hart.

Goult asked the mayor if she had instructed Hart to do this. She said no. Hart denied having made the request.

Asked to clarify the situation today, Mayor Elford said the inspection had been instigated by Don Wakelyn, sanitary inspector for Oak Bay and part of Victoria.

She said that Wakelyn had visited the riding academy in August and September because of complaints received from residents on Henderson. There had also been complaints about flies from people using the pavilion and tennis courts at Henderson Park, as well as from the principal of the Uplands elementary school.

★ ★ ★

"When he realized that, with the use of volunteer help and the age of Mr. and Mrs. Carley, things had got beyond them, he felt he had to report to his superior (Whitbread)."

Asked if the Feb. 28 deadline would be enforced, Mayor Elford said it had not exactly been waived "but the matter may be corrected before then."

She said that most of the problem had come from a six-month pile of manure that had been pushed back into the bushes instead of being carted away, becoming a breeding place for flies and rats.

Goult said that Whitbread had promised to "attempt to find a common solution" and that most of the problems were housekeeping ones that could quite simply be dealt with.

At the open meeting, Goult had said it seemed odd that Whitbread's report "was delivered to us and not the tenant".

Mrs. Elford explained today that Wakelyn and Whitbread felt council should have a full report before the Carleys were contacted.

Cougars' Slips Show Again

Special to The Times

REGINA — Victoria Cougars are enjoying a dramatic improvement in their goal production but defensive performance is virtually unchanged over a year ago, and that appears to be causing the unpredictable movement by the Western Canada Hockey League club.

Cougars' defensive slips showed again Monday night when Regina Pats tripped Victoria 8-2 in their first meeting of the 1972-73 campaign. It was Regina's fifth straight decision over Cougars since Victoria became a part of the 12-team league.

A year ago, after their first 15 games, Cougars managed only 38 goals while allowing 72 for a 3-11-0 won-lost-tied record. After their first 15 games this season, Cougars showed a balanced for-against record (68-68) and enjoyed an improved 5-9-1 mark.

Monday night, in opening a six-game swing through the Prairies, Victoria's defences sputtered again. And over-worked Sam Clegg could hardly be faulted for allowing eight goals.

Victoria's greatest problem appeared to be a lack of cohesion between defencemen and forwards. The forwards actually created more problems than the rearguards.

Forwards continually drifted out of position, and that made it easy for Pats to pen the Cougars in their own zone for many lengthy stretches. Victoria's breakout patterns failed to work because, more often than not, the wingers came back too deep in their own zone.

Defencemen, with no one to pass to at the points, tried to make it out on their own and that mushroomed Victoria's defensive mistakes.

Starry Dennis Sobchuk sparked Regina. Off to a disappointing start, the big centre banged in two goals within nine seconds and set up three others as the Pats checked in with their fourth triumph of the year.

Centre Dave Faulkner, one of Victoria's stronger performers, drew assists on both Cougar goals to raise his point total to 24 moved into second place in club scoring, behind captain Dale Cook.

Cougars continue their road trip by playing the Blades in Saskatoon tonight, then tackle the Jets in Winnipeg Wednesday.

A Muddled Finish Suggests Rule Change

If it was tough enough on Sunday trying to decide which football game to watch on the tube, now the Canadian Football League has another suggested rule change to mull over.

On one number on the dial was that thriller in Los Angeles with Minnesota Vikings upending the Rams, 45-41. At the same time at Winnipeg, Saskatchewan Roughriders were moving into the Grey Cup final with a 27-24 victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in a rinkey-dink finish that caused enough controversy for more than a couple of long Prairies winters.

It was a bizaare ending to an otherwise great comeback by the Riders, down 24-7 at one time in the third quarter. And if it at least put the most experienced West team in the Cup final against the East, Hamilton or Ottawa, it also left open the question what to do about one aspect of the single point in Canadian football.

In the Canadian game, a missed field goal can, and often does, go for a single point. To some observers, this isn't proper and right. Probably more so in Winnipeg today.

It was only a week ago that Jim Thorpe of the Bombers, speaking at a football luncheon, suggested that this type of a single point is one rule that should be thrown out.

Judgment Not a Simple Matter

It was Thorpe's contention that as there is normally no chance of running out a missed field goal attempt, why should the place kicker who missed, be given a point? If he punts for a single, fine. That's a different play. But on a field goal, no!

If Thorpe was ahead of his time, the whole Canadian football world knows about it now. Because on Sunday it happened. Saskatchewan's place kicker Jack Abendschan, with six seconds to play, missed on a field goal try, and the Bombers, trapped, had no recourse but to boot the ball out of the end zone.

The Riders kicked it back in, and the Bombers kicked it out again. Then came the penalty against Winnipeg for "no yards," and the Bombers were dead.

The upshot was that although time had run out, Saskatchewan got one more chance. Abendschan made no mistake the second time; the Riders were in the Grey Cup, and Winnipeg didn't have the tie it thought it had.

Aha! So the rules are the same for both. Right on. But in those final, frenzied seconds there was another call that wasn't made that could have determined the result otherwise, and all because of that rule, too.

In retrospect, (and in Winnipeg they'll agree) it seems safe to suggest that Bomber coach Jim Spavital did have a legitimate complaint, when he said the Riders should have been called for "no yards" when Mike Law fielded Abendschan's wide field goal try. Spavital wasn't arguing the call against his own team. "That was right," he said. But he thought the officials had missed the earlier one, and said so.

If they did, they don't have the instant replay camera to fall back on, either. So perhaps they may be excused. But still the "no yards" penalty is another rule that perhaps should come under review. It is almost a judgment call, determining what constitutes five yards; and on this particular day, if the Bombers got hurt, on another day, the bounce might go their way.

The Good, Big Man, Was Better

It did once before, in 1962, when Calgary's Harvey Whylie tried to kick a loose ball out of the end zone with a Bomber charging down on him. No penalty was called for "no yards," Wylie didn't get the ball out, Winnipeg scored a touchdown, and went on to the Grey Cup.

Still, the "no yards" rule is unique, and can't be changed unless unlimited blocking is allowed on punt returns, and is that good or bad?

Meanwhile, I'll go along with Thorpe's idea. It's not new. It has been discussed before. And it has merit. Definitely, it would help to end the type of confusion that resulted at Winnipeg on Sunday; and it would make it easier on the officials too.

The main point, now, however, is that the Riders finally were a more disciplined club, and the better defence when it counted most, and had the big runner the Bombers thought they had.

So, forget the rules squabble. The Riders won it on ability and determination, coming from far back to down the Bombers, who folded under the pressure of Ron Lancaster and Co.

George Reed, a magic name in Regina for many years, was the big man who made the difference. He ran for 156 yards, while Mack Herron, the Bombers heralded little man, couldn't do it, almost alone. He was held to 70 yards, all but eight of Winnipeg's entire rushing yardage.

Washington Boy Scout Troop Runs Its NFL Streak to Seven

"Hooray for Pat, hooray for Pat Fischer," continued the off-key locker room chorus. "Hooray for Alvin; hooray for Alvin Haymond. Rah, Rah Rah."

The Redskins are the world's oldest, largest, highest-pad boy scouts. George Allen is as much their scoutmaster as the coach of the National Football Legue powerhouse.

After a victory Allen passes out game footballs like merit badges. Monday night was Fischer's turn for gutty defence that got him a black eye and Haymond's turn for nifty kick returning.

"We sing because we're happy," said Allen. "It was a big win for us. The pressure's now on Dallas Cowboys for Thursday's game. We'll just sit back and watch what happens."

Washington had just smacked Atlanta Falcons 24-13 for their seventh straight win, the longest streak of Redskin victories since 1942 when D.C. had its last world champion.

The Redskins are 9-1, one game better than the current National Football League champions, Dallas, with the Cowboys meeting San Francisco on Thanksgiving Day.

Atlanta, 5-5, lost a 24-hour grip of first place in the NFC West as Los Angeles and the '49ers, both 5-4-1, popped ahead when the Falcons collapsed in the chilling wind at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium.

Billy Kilmer hit 7-for-7 in the third quarter, topping an 89-yeard match with an 18-yard touchdown pass to Larry Brown and later hitting tight end Jerry Smith on a 12-yard score.

A 10-7 Falcon half time lead vanished amid the Kilmer barrage that put Washington into 21-10 command. Bill Bell kicked a fourth-period field goal for Atlanta, but Curt Knight matched it with a 37-yarder that drew a standing ovation from the partisan Washington crowd.

DOUG PEDEN - EDITOR

Als Develop Broken Play

MONTREAL (CP) — The plot surrounding the future of coach Sam Etcheverry and general manager J. I. Albrecht of Montreal Alouettes thickened Monday afternoon.

The latest broken play developed between owner Sam Berger of the Canadian Football League club and columnist John Robertson of The Star.

The newspaper printed a front-page story under Robertson's byline in its second edition to the effect that Berger had fired Etcheverry and Albrecht at a morning meeting held in the owner's uptown office.

But the switch came when Berger told The Canadian Press that the story was untrue and repeated this statement to other reporters.

"It just isn't true," Berger said of the story. "I don't know where these stories come from."

"We were just evaluating the situation," Berger said. "I haven't come to any conclusion of any kind."

When the denials, including one from Etcheverry, started to appear, Robertson related in a later story how he called the Alouettes' owner again on the subject.

"I thought we were just talking. I didn't think you were going to write anything today," Robertson quoted Berger as saying during his second call.

Robertson, writing in the paper's final edition, outlined how he had called Berger early Monday to discuss last week's CFL meeting and a proposed expansion to the United States.

After this subject was exhausted, Robertson said he asked Berger: "What are you going to do about your coaching situation?"

"John, I've decided that Mr. Etcheverry has to go. We just have to make a change, the club has no discipline. We have to find a real tough guy like that Spavital in Winnipeg . . . someone who can command and get respect from the players," he reported Berger as saying.

Robertson reported the conversation then switched to a replacement for Etcheverry and Berger told him that John Bassett, owner of Toronto Argonauts, had recommended his recently-fired head coach, Leo Cahill.

Robertson wrote that he then asked Berger about the general manager's job.

"Well, I think J. I.'s got to go too," the report quoted Berger as admitting. "He's just not a general manager. He brought in far too many players and not enough good ones.

"He just doesn't seem to be the man for the job."

Hull Ordered Off Ice Again

By The Canadian Press

The Golden Jet of the World Hockey Association has been grounded again—or has he?

A circuit court judge in Chicago issued a restraining order Monday to stop Bobby Hull from playing for Winnipeg Jets in the WHA.

However, Hull said from Houston he would play in tonight's game against the Aeros and his words were echoed by Jim Smith, president of the Aeros.

That, apparently, was before Hull had talked to his lawyer and Jerry Torshen, a lawyer who does work for the WHA in Chicago, said Hull wouldn't play.

What is certain is that Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League applied to have Hull restrained from playing in the rival WHA. Monday, Judge Francis T. Delaney signed the restraining order because the WHA hadn't posted a $2.5 million bond with the United States district court in Philadelphia.

Judge Delaney said the deadline for posting the bond was Monday—a deadline imposed by Judge Higginbotham.

Ball Playoffs Under Study

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball would expand, rather than cut, its extensive post-season playoffs under proposals to be brought before the owners at their winter meetings, scheduled to open next Monday in Honolulu.

Under a plan for restructuring the playoffs, the first two teams in each division of the two major-leagues would qualify. The second-place team in each division would meet the winner of the other division in a best-of-three series, the winners to meet in a best-of-five series for the league championship.

The current format calls for a best-of-five series between divisional winners to determine participants in the World Series.

Two other proposals for changing the playoff structure on the agenda are:

- Two teams, irrespective of division, with the highest percentage outside the divisional champions play a best-of-five series for the right to meet the winner of the divisional playoffs.
- The present two six-team divisions in each league be carved up into three divisions of four teams each. The winners of each division would be joined by the team with the best percentage among the three second-place finishers for a best-of-five series, the survivors to meet best-of-five for the league title.

Other items on the agenda include:

- Report on player negotiations. Efforts will be made to prevent a player strike such as that which delayed the season opening this year.
- Change the rules so that games halted by weather, which now become shortened regulation games, become suspended games to be completed later.
- Increase the number of players who may be put on the 21-day disabled list from two to three.

HOCKEY TIPS

By Bobby Orr

For me personally, and for the Boston Bruins as a team, the first six weeks of the National Hockey League season were unhappy ones.

I'm often asked what makes a team suddenly go into a tailspin and what you do to correct the mistakes. In the case of this year's Bruins, we started the season as heavy favorites to repeat as Stanley Cup champs despite a number of key losses to the World Hockey Association.

But the team has neglected the basic fundamentals of winning hockey — backchecking, skating and positional play. The club just didn't hustle and instead of being on top, Boston had trouble with almost every team in the league.

As for my knee injury, recuperation has taken much longer than the doctors expected. I followed all the advice, swam a lot in the summer, lifted weights and started light skating in August.

However, my most ice time in any game was 11 minutes and I had to stop playing. Now I'm ready to give the knee another test and, after playing games Saturday and Sunday, I am optimistic that I will be able to continue on a regular basis.

The big surprise of this season has been the fast start of Los Angeles Kings. Bob Pulford really has the team playing well and deserves a lot of credit.

The New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens are playing as expected in the Eastern Division. If the Bruins don't soon start playing better, it will be a four-team fight for the other two playoff positions among Boston, Detroit, Buffalo and Toronto.

A Treat From Skating's Elite

Only the best will escape the perils of competition in the British Columbia sectional figure skating championships in Victoria, Dec. 7-9.

City skating fans, however, will still be able to see the "best" in action during a series of exhibition performances.

Karen Magnussen, Canadian senior women's champion last year; Ruth Hutchison, rubber-up in the nationals; Canadian dance champions Barry and Louise Soper, and Canadian senior men's runner-up Paul Bonefant all qualify automatically for the 1973 national championships.

All five Vancouver-area stars will display their talents during the final night of the provincial meet.

For the rest of the province's title-minded skaters, the B.C. sectional is a stepping stone to the nationals, scheduled for Vancouver in January.

Competition will run Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Racquet Club of Victoria with the Saturday night championship finals and exhibitions slated for Memorial Arena, starting at 8.

Men's and women's singles, pairs and dance events will be held in pre-novice, novice, junior and senior classes.

Figures will make up only 40 per cent of the program this year while the balance will be decided on the free skating program. For the last four years, figures and free skating points have been split 50-50.

Victoria will be represented by four advanced skaters in the provincials.

Paul Fisher and Brenda Thomas, both of the Victoria skating Club, will compete in senior events while Barbara Maple and Maureen Jasper, both of the Racquet Club, are set to try for junior titles.

Juan de Fuca Climbs Ladder

Juan de Fuca Gulls utilized home ice to advantage Monday, hammering Lake Cowichan Baird's Trucking 9-2 to move into a tie for second place in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League with Fuller's Lake Flyers.

Ed Nichols paced the victory with three goals while Dave Archibald added two and singles were contributed by Barry McLachlan, Mark Naylor, Steve Hanson and Bruce Armitage.

Ali, Foster Set Targets

STATELINE, Nev. (AP) — Around the corner from the nickel slot machines in the Sahara-Tahoe casino, Muhammed Ali and Bob Foster fight tonight for higher stakes and a possible shot at boxing's biggest jackpot—the world heavyweight championship.

"I'm waiting for Joe Frazier," said Ali, the former heavyweight champ, on the eve of his scheduled 12-round bout with light heavyweight champ Foster.

"I don't know what to expect from Foster, but he'll give me trouble for a few rounds," he said about his 33-year-old opponent, expected to weigh in at about 180 pounds.

Ali has predicted he'll stop Foster in eight rounds and says the lighter but taller fighter "has to rely on a lucky quick punch" to score an upset.

The 30-year-old Ali will have a weight advantage of about 40 pounds. Foster has held the light-heavy crown for 4½ years, but was knocked out by Frazier in two rounds in an attempt to take the heavyweight title.

BOWLERS ALTER NAME, ELECT NEW PRESIDENT

Holding their annual general meeting at the Canadian Pacific clubhouse, members of the Greater Victoria Lawn Bowling Association decided to switch the name of their organization to the Vancouver Island Lawn Bowling Association.

Eric Hadfield of the Oak Bay club was selected to the president's position with Percy Hawes and Lionel Nichols named first and second vice-presidents.

Veteran Sam Barr was chosen as honorary president and continues as umpire-in-chief with Hector Tapp as his assistant.

Harry Thomas, the association's auditor, and John Clegg will serve as Island representatives to the B.C. Lawn Bowling Association.

'Sea Water' May Flow From Sidney Taps

Distilled sea water may become the drink of the future for Sidney residents.

Ronald Upward, chief commissioner of the Greater Victoria Water Board, outlined this possibility Monday to 40 people at a Camosun College noon forum at the Provincial Museum.

A sea water distillery in Sidney could in seven or eight years be more economical than running a 14-mile pipeline from Thetis Lake to the Saanich Peninsual community of 5,000, Upward said.

Cost of distilling sea water has dropped to about 60 cents per 1,000 gallons, he said. And there should be further drastic decreases in the cost of distilling sea water unless the rising cost of energy needed in the distilling process affects the price, he added.

By the time a pipeline to Sidney was built, cost per 1,000 gallons would be about 30 cents, said Upward, and this could be changed by steadily increasing construction costs.

If a pipeline were built connecting Sidney to the Greater Victoria water supply system, he said, the 5,000 Sidney users couldn't possibly pay for the cost of construction.

It is also questionable whether the four municipalities that own the water system — Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay — would be prepared to pick up the tab.

Water shortages in summer in Sidney have in recent years caused warm weather restrictions on the use of water.

HOUSEWIVES SUCCEED IN HALTING AIRPORT

DUNCAN — Construction on the new airport in Glenora will be halted until residents and the society can come to an agreement, Cowichan Airport Society president Jim Painter said today.

A group of about 30 Glenora housewives picketed the 40-acre site last week when a bulldozer arrived to start levelling the strip. Residents have been opposing the project for more than a year.

The Cowichan Valley Regional Board, which leased the land to the society, is committed to the project through a five-year lease signed by both parties last November.

Sports Centre Planned

A $1.3 million convention centre and sports complex is planned by a group of businessmen who applied to Central Saanich council Monday for rezoning of rural farmland on Mt. Newton Cross Road.

Alec Izaat, 7997 Turgoose Terrace, spokesmen for the 16-member group, said that 18 acres have been purchased for the complex which will be built by private funds. No subsidies will be required and the complex will be open to the public on a general admission basis, added Izaat.

"People are fed to the teeth with municipally-operated arenas," explained Izaat in an interview later. "Privately operated centres are now paying dividends because they can be more efficientlly operated."

Plans include a 50-metre indoor pool, and 85-foot by 200-foot skating arena, and eight curling sheets. The ice rink will be a year-around operation but will be covered with a wooden floor. Curling space will be used out of season for roller skating, lacrosse and meetings.

A two-storey central core will provide administrative and concession space and lounges with a view of main floor activities. About 3,000 spectators will be accommodated.

The site is considered to be the best of eight locations covered by the group. It is eight miles from Swartz Bay and Royal Oak, four miles from Sidney and Brentwood, and this location, said Izaat, ensures complete utilization.

Izaat, a keen hockey referee and former competitive swimmer, said that his group found little difficulty in raising funds for the "one stop complex".

"Recreation and leisure-time industry is the fastest growing business today," he said.

Projections of revenue and operational costs indicate that admission prices will be identical to similar structures in Victoria and Izaat predicts that the centre can be in operation by late spring.

"Peninsula kids and school districtt 63 will have first crack at ice time," promises Izaat.

Mud Makes Muscle

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) —Ellington Darden, a baby-faced PhD with Mr. America's muscles, says the secret to a strong, healthy body is as clear as mud.

"It's a pretty unique feeling," the 23-year-old Darden says, "I guess it's like the difference between drinking a glass of water and a thick milkshake."

With a PhD in physical education from Florida State in hand, Darden is studying for another doctoral degree in foods and nutrition. The six-foot, 195-pound former college football tackle has won more than 100 trophies in weightlifting and body-building competitions.

American Welfare Rep Plans Visit

The American social security administration representative in Port Angeles, Wash., Lyle Grisham, will be in Victoria Thursday and Friday, Dec. 7 and 8.

He can be reached at the U.S. immigration and naturalization service office, new Canadian Pacific dock building, 254 Belleville St., from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. on Dec. 7 and from 8:30 a.m. to noon Dec. 8.

New address of the Port Angeles social security office is 107 East 8th St., Port Angeles, Washington 98362. New telephone number from Vancouver Island is 1-206-457-1167.

Newsletter Pins Premature Title

Greater Victoria school trustee Walter Donald moved Monday night that the current edition of Info, the district's newsletter, be scrapped and rewritten.

He said a diagram of the redesigned administration showed an individual in the position of executive assistant to the superintendent of schools — "a position which has not been approved by the board."

The newsletter, distributed to 1,500-2,000 school district employees, shows Jack Dalgleish as executive assistant to A. J. Longmore.

"I'm happy this individual is on the team," Donald said," but I feel very strongly this newsletter should be withdrawn."

Trustee Peter Bunn said the word "acting" before Dalgleish's position would have solved the situation.

Open-Pit Mining Slammed in Saanich

J. R. Gillespie, 119 Helmcken Road, owns a hangar on the private air strip nearby and describes the gravel mining operation as "a disese which is eating awy this district."

There are a number of gravel pits behind Keating Cross Road, one municipally owned and two privately owned. Gravel has been excavated for 40 years.

Gillispie maintains that although the area is industrially zoned, municipal bylaws do not cover mining and no extraction fees or royalties are charged.

Local taxpayers should have a voice in the matter, urged Gillespie, "stop for a moment and get the law straightened out."

Dereck Mallard, peninsular SPEC president, backed Gillespie's appeal by asking if council has given consideration to a bylaw covering environmental protection for reclamation of pits.

Mayor A. M. Galbraith said the municipality does have zoning bylaws to cover surface activities and a gravel pit bylaw which was adopted after a public hearing.

Songhees to Get Trailer Class

Greater Victoria school board will give a portable building to the Songhees Indian band in compensation for changes in plans for Craigflower elementary school.

Indians will use the annex as a pre-school and study centre.

The school board planned to construct an annex to Craigflower on reserve land offered by the Songhees band. The plan was suspended in the face of parent and teacher opposition to splitting the school, but trustees felt there was a moral obligation to the Songhees.

Board crews will move one of the district's 50 portable classrooms to the site originally planned for the annex, Bunn said. The move would cost $2,500, he said.

Trustee Walter Donald said the board did not have the right to spend money on such a gesture. School support director Sig Dietze said the board had authorized $30,000 for general movements of portable buildings.

$1,500 Haul By Robbers

Victoria police are investigating the theft of almost $1,500 in jewelry, cash and clothing from the home of Mrs. Fung Lai Wu, No. 307, 1830 Fern.

Police were called to Mrs. Wu's home Sunday evening after she returned from staying with friends overnight. Three suitcases in a bedroom closet had been removed, one containing an envelope with $360 in $20 bills. A man's necklace valued at $400, rings worth $500 and a watch valued at $50 were taken from a purse in the hall of the apartment.

Further checking by the apartment occupant revealed that two cameras, items of personal clothing and a watch had also been stolen. Value of these items was $200.

Mrs. Wu's apartment door appeared to have been forced by means of a screwdriver. Police checking the apartment block also found another door on the floor above bore similar screwdriver marks, but no entry had been made to the premises.

Mrs. Wu had no insurance on the items stolen.

Inventors Check Humane Trap's Snap

TORONTO (CP) — Scientists and organizations concerned with the humane trapping of animals are searching for the perfect trap that will save animals pain.

Two Ontario university professors now are engaged in research which will show how fast an animal trap snaps and how animals approach the trap and how it hits them.

Prof. Roy Newcombe of McMaster University in Hamilton is using a high-speed movie camera to find out the speed of traps, while at the University of Guelph, Dr. Robert Walker, a zoologist, is doing work using a slower movie camera.

These scientists, with the help of supporters of humane trapping in the United States and Britain, want to create the surefire, humane trap.

The work of the scientists is organized and financed in Canada by the Canadian Association for Humane Trapping (CAHT), but most of the work at the two universities is sponsored by the universities.

SEEK REPLACEMENT

Aim of the research is to replace the old leg-hold trap in which the animal's leg is caught by two bands of spring-driven steel, usually when the animal steps on a trigger.

The trap usually holds the animal by its lacerated leg until the trapper comes to kill it and take the pelt, or until the animal rips or chews the paw off and escapes.

CAHT hopes to make a trap that will either hold the animal without harm until the trapper comes or will kill it instantly.

The traps tested at McMaster and Guelph so far have all been variations on the snapping steel of the leg-hold trap.

At a recent international conference on humane trapping organized in Toronto by CAHT, Prof. Newcombe demonstrated the testing of a trap sold under the name Instant Killer and invented by a trapper in Sturgeon Falls, Ont.

While a special camera whirred at 1,000 frames a second, 40 times the speed of normal movie cameras, the trap, clamped to a stand, was sprung.

Prof. Newcombe explained he examined the film frame by frame to find out how far the bar moved in each thousandth of a second and calculated the energy at each part of the stroke, which lasts through about 30 frames.

Prof. Newcombe also showed on other machines how springs are tested to find out how much bending they can take without losing their shape.

The team at Guelph is doing the other end of the research, finding out in controlled conditions how an animal approaches a trap.

CAHT and similar organizations are trying to interest inventors other than trappers in their problem of humane trapping, but until the perfect trap is developed, the two researchers will continue trying to help inventors make their improved traps.

B.C.'s PRIMITIVE ERA ENDS

On Nov. 19, 1858, year of the Barkerville gold rush, James Douglas was sworn in as the first governor of B.C.

Barrett said a number of orders-in-council were passed, but did not disclose their contents. Orders are usually published several days after cabinet approval.

Asked about the government's announced takeover of the B.C. Telephone Co., the premier jokingly replied that among other things, he would give a box of beads, half a bottle of rum, two sides of pork and trapping rights in downtown Vancouver for the next 1,200 years in exchange for B.C. Tel.

In a speech to more than 1,000 schoolchildren and local residents, Barrett said B.C. has come through a century of primitive change when the government had acted, mainly out of material interest.

It was a time of transition, with children now representing a challenge. They were not so materially-oriented as previous generations and had a different focus on life.

Pensioners 'Afraid'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Documented cases of rent increases involving senior citizens represent "only the tip of the iceberg," Orson Banfield, chairman of the Vancouver Rental Accommodation Grievance Board, said Monday.

They fear they'll be evicted if they report increases to agencies which will turn the information over to Rehabilitation Minister Norm Levi prevents most senior citizens from speaking up, he said.

"They feel that if they give their name or the location of where they live, the landlord will simply say 'out'."

Levi has said he will make public the names of any landlords who take advantage of the recent old-age pension boost in British Columbia to raise rents charged to pensioners.

Banfield said his office has received about 70 complaints of rent hikes to seniors in the last three weeks. Of that number, none would give their name and less than half gave an address, he said.

Engineers Want Own Union

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor and the Association of Professional Engineers clashed Monday over the formation of one bargaining unit or several specialized units for government employees.

In briefs submitted to the provincial commission studying collective bargaining rights for government workers, the federation suggested one strong bargaining unit while the engineers wanted their own separate negotiation team.

Ray Haynes, secretary-treasurer of the federation, told the five-man commission the federation hoped "public employees in B.C. would not want to weaken their bargaining position by fragmenting into several small bargaining units.

"We encourage the establishment of large effective bargaining units," he said.

But professor L. G. R. Crouch, speaking for the engineers, said engineers "should have the express rights to constitute a bargaining unit comprised only of professional engineers and engineers in training."

1954 Slaying Charge Laid

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Edmund Joseph White, 58, of Surrey, was charged Monday with non-capital murder in connection with the death 18 years ago of John Keith Robertson.

Robertson died in September, 1954 in his lonely shack on an island in Indian Arm, North of Vancouver.

The charge was read to White in North Vancouver Provincial Court Monday when he appeared briefly before Judge H. S. Mahon. He was remanded in custody to Nov. 27. White did not enter a plea.

In 1954, the pathologist who examined Robertson's body said he was "almost certain" the death was due to natural causes. And the coroner's jury which investigated his death ruled out foul play and returned a verdict of death from natural causes. He was 68.

RCMP would not explain the renewed interest in the case, except to say they'd recently received some additional information.

An RCMP spokesman said Monday the police had never fully agreed with the natural causes verdict and kept the file open, as they do with all murder cases.

Robertson's body was found in his lean-to Sept. 11 by his wife and her cousin, Hans Eric Stephan.

Mrs. Robertson told the inquest jury two weeks later that she had visited her recluse husband a week before his death and it had been agreed he would return to their home at Pitt River. She had given him $50 to pay expenses of the move.

When he didn't show up, Mrs. Robertson and her cousin went to see what had happened and found him dead. They also found that the wallet containing the $50 was missing. Robertson had been dead about a week before his wife found him.

Lead-Lined Home 'Stops Sounds'

TORONTO (CP) — The International Lead Zinc Research Organization Inc. ILZRO is developing a metal house that will be ready for the market within three years.

"We haven't had our fair share of the housing market," S. F. Radtke, executive vice-president and director of research, told a news conference. He said the metal house that has been designed is better than wood for insulation, mass production and recoverability of materials.

Radtke said that it was hard at first to get acceptance from architects and builders but "now, with the increasing concern about noise pollution, we'll probably have standards that will force this market for lead."

He said lead "can stop sounds going through walls" and about a ton of lead would be used in each house.

Posties Impatient For New Contract

OTTAWA (CP) — While postal workers, waiting for news of a working contract grow more impatient, a conciliation board set up to deal with issues in dispute between their unions and government was still talking business Monday.

The conciliation board, headed by Owen Shime of the Ontario Labor Relations Board is working on an indefinite extension of its original term. The extension was requested about 12 days ago.

Wildcat walkouts in Toronto last week by postal workers reflect the growing restlessness of the union members, waiting for a new working agreement since March when their last one expired.

The Toronto workers were forced back to work Sunday by a Supreme Court of Ontario injunction.

EX-HEADHUNTERS RALLY TO GRAHAM

KOHIMA, India (AP) — Billy Graham's words had to be translated into 18 dialects Monday night, but the evangelist drew a response from 100,000 Naga tribesmen whose ancestors were headhunters.

Graham's voice echoed off the surrounding hills as he opened a four-day crusade in Nagaland, an Indian state celebrating the 100th anniversary of the arrival of the first Baptist missionary from the United States.

When he reached Kohima, the state capital, Graham was greeted by 100,000 Nagas. He was one of the few foreign visitors to Nagaland in years.

Then all filed on to an athletic field to hear Graham preach.

The people wore colorful shawls as they sat on the ground in 18 groups, each representing a different dialect spoken in the predominantly Christian state.

It was the most multi-lingual crusade of his long evangelical career. An aide said that three languages were the most that were used before, in both Nigeria and Ethiopia.

The crusade appeared to be among Graham's more successful ones.

His appearance here was the climax of three months of planning by local Baptist leaders. Their major problem was not knowing whether Graham would be allowed to come.

The Indian government not only gave the evangelist permission to come to Nagaland, an area off limits to foreigners, but it also allowed him to bring six associates.

The crusade cost the Naga Baptists more than 100,000 rupees ($13,000). Most of the money was raised when volunteers and their families helped build a public road on contract for the state government.

Wiring Blamed In $40,000 Blaze

DUNCAN — The offices of chartered accountants Hill, Atchison, Hancock and Co. received more than $40,000 fire, smoke and water damage Monday evening.

Duncan volunteer fire department controlled the blaze in less than an hour and saved the Royal Bank and offices of stockbrokers Doherty McCuaig Ltd. in the premises below.

Facelift for Works Yard

An immediate start on $225,000 worth of expansion and improvements to Saanich municipal yard was approved Monday by Saanich council.

Of the total estimated cost, $125,000 will be taken from the municipality's $325,000 tax sale land account and $100,000 obtained through a short-term capital loan.

Municipal engineer Bob Daye described existing accommodation for some operations as "appalling." He said "until we get proper accommodation we can't do proper preventive maintenance programs."

A feature of the work will be a concrete block six-bay garage with grease pits, hoists, office and stockroom.

The Saanich works yard is located on McKenzie between Quadra and Borden and has been operating at that location about a dozen years.

Another phase of the approved expansion will be construction of a second access road and gate from Borden, together with fencing and paving.

In other business council accepted a report from Advisory Planning Commission recommending favorable consideration of a proposed special status for Gordon Head to protect it from future spot zoning.

Council has already called for a public hearing into designation of the residential suburb as an official community plan, with certain areas reserved for multiple-density housing and commercial-service developmwent centred at San Juan and Tyndall.

The APC report was referred to the public hearing, for which a date has yet to be set.

Social services administrator John Gibson reported on the recent provincial government decision to increase Christmas bonuses for welfare recipients and Tribe pointed out the net effect is to reduce the Saanich responsibility of the total bonus to about $400 this year. He said Saanich would continue to ensure that the bonus would amount to at least $4 per member of a welfare family.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Sentences totalling 14 months were ordered by Judge William Ostler in provincial court Monday for a man charged with attempted uttering and theft under $200.

Daniel O'Donahue, 42, of no fixed address, told police when he was arrested Nov. 16 in The Bay that he was attempting to cash an unemployment insurance cheque for $142 for a friend who was in hospital.

Police investigation revealed, however, that O'Donahue had been using another man's name.

On the same day, O'Donahue stole a briefcase and raincoat valued at $90, from a car owned by Ald. Clyde Savage and parked in the municipal carpark.

The man received 14 months concurrent on each charge.

* * *

Eugene W. Mathe, 58, of 550 Johnson, was sentenced at the afternoon session to a total of 59 days for contributing to juvenile delinquency and being unlawfully at large.

Mathe was apprehended after buying a 26-ounce bottle of wine from the liquor store on Government for two girls, aged 14 and 15. Ostler ordered 45 days for the man on this charge.

The man also received 14 days for failing to appear in court on Monday morning on the first charge.

Prosecutor John Macintyre noted that the accused had "a very extensive criminal record involving offences of dishonesty, vagrancy and drunkenness."

* * *

Warnock was apprehended after leaving Woolworth's, 1200 Douglas, with 25 feet of flexible cord and an electric light socket in a travel bag.

* * *

Two men were each given suspended sentences and put on six months' probation for possession of narcotics.

Brian Charles Green, 21, of Vancouver, was apprehended with a bag of marihuana in his shirt pocket in the 700 block Yates on Nov. 18.

* * *

In court Saturday, Victor Van Alstyne of 1320 Broad was fined $250 and ordered to make restitution after pleading guilty to false pretences under $200.

He admitted cashing a worthless cheque for $32.85 at Woodward's Thursday for groceries and $20 in cash.

* * *

Ronald Glass, 34, was put on probation for six months after pleading guilty to possession of marijuana and was fined a total of $300 after admitting to three driving offences.

Police found a small plastic bag with some "seeds" in it when Glass was arrested Friday and the accused told officers it was marijuana.

He was fined $25 each for driving without a licence and for driving without a licensed driver accompanying him and the minimum $250 fine for driving without insurance. All the driving offences occurred last month.

* * *

In traffic court, Monday, three persons, Albert Ernest Maindonald, 34, 113-1414 Hillside, Gary Lavoie, 20, of Youbou and Gerald James Gough, 22, were each fined $350 by Judge Harold Alder for impaired driving.

Cass-Beggs Eyes New HQ

VANCOUVER — David Cass-Beggs, who takes over Jan. 1 as chairma nof B.C. Hydro, paid a "familiarization visit" to Hydro headquarters in downtown Vancouver Monday, his first since his appointment by British Columbia's New Democratic Party government was announced.

He would not give details of his visit, saying "I think it is private business really," but it was learned he met with outgoing Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum and lunched with heads of various Hydro divisions.

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — Media owners in Canada have no feeling of responsibility to their audience because they are in business to make money, says Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

He said the newsroom of a newspaper is like a brothel and "the editor is like the madame — rarely obliged to satisfy his clients."

SCARBOROUGH, England — Yorkshire holiday-maker Bill Taylor showed his family the exact spot on a steep country path where, three years previously, he had slipped and broken his leg. For the record he slipped again — and this time, broke his leg in two places. "We had gone to Scarborough for a little break," his wife Sheila said: "But we hadn't expected this sort of break."

Queen Given Top Marks For Informal Celebration

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Family and 200 guests danced into the small hours today celebrating the queen's silver wedding and the success of a break in royal tradition.

The Queen's "meet-the-people" venture — a walk through crowded streets with frequent stops to exchange small talk with bystanders — won top marks from London papers.

This was the first time the Queen and Prince Philip had tried the technique in London. They were encouraged to do so by the success of a similar venture during this year's tour of Australia.

The Queen, walking from a Guildhall luncheon Monday celebrating the 25th anniversary of her marriage, went straight to the crowds, shaking hands and chatting.

"I'm so glad you could come to see us," she told a little girl perched on her father's shoulder.

The girl was shy and speechless. "She'll never forget this," said her father.

Prince Philip asked a couple how long they had been married.

Eleven years, was the reply. "The first 12 years are the worst," Philip said.

A 'Vegetable Shade' For Your Balcony

The apartment dweller with balcony tubs who have been experimenting this year with their own ideas are, for the most part, enthusiastic about results.

Some have combined the bright flowers of trailing pink geraniums with the upright grey leaves of sage, having small purple flowers. Others have grown clumps of chives with dainty mauve blossoms, contrasting them with scarlet salvia and the fine foliage of parsley plants.

These apartment dwellers have liked having the fresh green herbs to add flavor to bought foods. Their enthusiasm has reached the point where scarlet runner beans are to be grown next year as a shade screen for the small meal table where supper is enjoyed each evening.

Four bean plant are all that will be needed, trained on strings attacked to two upright wood stakes and a crossbar. In balconies not subjected to strong summer winds, this is a fine idea.

I heard about the success of runner beans for small spaces from a gardener with a tiny dooryard plot. She grew a dozen scarlet plants on a frameagainst the wall, harvesting beans all season enough to give away and even freeze a few for winter use.

This constant picking of every bean before it reaches maturity is the reason for long season cropping. In front of the beans were grown a dozen dwarf pea plants, with similar success. The beans had the warmth of the wall, the peas were out in the cooler air, just the right conditions for each.

Ornamental flowering potted plants found favor with balcony gardeners, too, the exotics ranging all the way from leafy Dracaenas from New Zealand to a lovely specimen of Bourgainvillea from South America, whose foliage was covered with red flower bracts for many weeks.

These tropicals and other similar tender potted plants which have been growing on balconies during summer must be regarded as subject to damage by low temperatures and, or, freezing winds in winter. The hardier ones will survive if given temporary protection of cardboard cartons with soft, porous cotton or wool material covering pot and plant completely.

This must be of a temporary nature, used only in the emergencies mentioned, and gradually removed as weather conditions return to normal. Only in the bitterest weather we have known here should the majority of the kind of less hardy plants used for balconies be brought into the apartment.

Then it must be to the coolest place, and for the shortest period, to prevent softening the growth.

Always remember the loss hazard exists when growing tender plants in balcony tubs or pots. If you cannot give protection in winter when needed, it is better to stick to plants known to be quite hardy in your conditions.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal we have another example of a declarer who lost a vulnerable slam contract because he staked everything on a 50-50 finesse. As will be observed, he had an absolutely guaranteed contract. The hand arose in a rubber-bridge game. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West

3 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ◇.

West's queen of diamonds opening lead was captured by dummy's ace, after which the ace of trumps was cashed, gathering in the two adversely-held trumps. Next came a club to declarer's ace, and this was followed by the ruffing of a club in dummy.

The three of spades was then led off the board, South finessing his queen unsuccessfully. Eventually declarer had to lose another sapde trick. Thus he incurred a one-trick set.

Had a declarer been a better player, he would have recognized that, thanks to south's possession of the nine of spades, the finesse of the spade Queen was the wrong play to have taken. After winning the opening diamond lead, and picking up the outstanding trumps, South should have ruffed a diamond.

Next would come the ace of clubs, and this would be followed by a ruff of a club in dummy. The board's remaining diamond would then be ruffed, after which South's last club would be ruffed. At this point, with the lead being in dummy, both clubs and diamonds would have been eliminated from the North-South hands.

Now would come the three of spades, and with East following suit with a low spade, South would insert his nine-spot. This trick would be captured by West's ten — and, simultaneously, West would become the victim of an end play.

If West returned either a club or a diamond, it would be ruffed in dummy. On this trick South would discard his queen of spades. And if, after winning the spade ten, West elected to lead a spade, declarer would win two spade tricks with his ace and queen.

Of course, if South had not possessed the spade nine, the guaranteed end play, as presented above, would not have been possible. But then, one must remember that nine-spots are more useful than twos or threes, since they can accomplish things that deuces and theys cannot.

Bombay Protests Freight Jams

By RAM SUNDAR
CP Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — The lives of nearly 300,000 people who have their homes along Bombay's waterfront are dominated by a single, overpowering sound.

The sound comes from the perpetual unloading of freight by transport companies. Every day, thousands of trucks from the far corners of India bring to the Dongri-Crawford Market district all kinds of articles for export.

After waiting for years for things to improve—dozens of appeals were made to the city government to discipline the truck operators—the citizens now have decided to do a bit of cleaning up themselves.

HOLD DEMONSTRATION

First, a big demonstration was staged by the residents to protest the government's failure to regulate the working of the transport companies by enforcing Municipal Law No. 26 which says no loading and unloading of freight by transport companies will be permitted in a residential district.

Shouting slogans, women and children marched through the streets. One placard read Save Bombay From Trucks, while another said Bombay Is For People, Not Lorries.

The next step in the agitation was to send polite warnings to the transport companies not to block the streets.

"If you don't move out soon," an anonymous telephone caller told a truck owner, "we will see to it that your trucks don't move at all."

There has been some violence. The offices of two truck operators were damaged by stone throwing and some businessmen were assaulted. But the agitation has so far remained generally peaceful.

TRUCK KILLS FOUR

However, no one knows how long the peace will continue. One morning three school children and their ayah (woman escort) were killed when a speeding freight truck mounted a sidewalk and hit them.

The accident resulted in the formation of a group popularly known as "Bombay's noble guerrillas." Consisting mostly of youngg people aged from 12 to 20, it served notice on the authorities to clear the streets of trucks.

A survey published by Bombay Evening News showed that even school buses and milk vans cannot enter the Dongri-Crawford Market area because of obstruction by freight trucks.

The Evening News said there are nearly 2,000 transport companies operating in the two-square-mile area and that many of them are not even licensed.

Police have received complaints that the burly, bearded truck drivers often "tease" local women.

An ugly situation was averted when some truck drivers apologized to local residents on behalf of one of their colleagues who had tried to take liberties with a housewife whose path had been blocked by merchandise.

Pioneer Crafts Displayed

NEW GERMANY, N.S. (CP) — Through the efforts of Vicki Lynn Crowe handicrafts with designs dating back to pioneer days were displayed in New York City.

Miss Crowe, native of New Germany and former assistant editor of interior design for American Home magazine, returned here to put into practice her idea that handicrafts done by rural Nova Scotia women could find broader markets in the United States.

With the help of Nob Bailey, regional development officer with the Nova Scotia development department, she was able to display her collection of 30 items at the Canadian consulate-general.

They went back to pioneer days when women used odds and ends called suttles to bring color and warmth to their homes.

HORSEMEAT USE UP

SANTIAGO (AP) — The eating of horsemeat is nothing new in Chile, any more than it is in Europe, but the recent shortage of beef has put a premium on equine edibles here.

"Business is up 30 per cent over last year," says Marcel Toro, owner of a shop in bustling La Vega market.

"The competition is terrible. There used to be three horsemeat stands here in La Vega until last year. Now there are six."

Despite a 2,600-mile coastline, Chileans don't eat much seafood. And lamb, pork and poultry come far behind beef in popularity.

Beef, most of which must be imported from neighboring Argentina, has become increasingly scarce in the last two years as the United States dollar supplies for imports dwindled. Beef can be legally sold in butchershops and restaurants on weekends. Often weeks go by before the government makes any available to distributors.

This has driven many Chileans to the horsemeat butchers, a mixed blessing to them.

"All the available horses around Santiago have been butchered and eaten," Toro complained to a visitor over the noise of a dozen customers clamoring for service.

Has-been race horses from the Santiago Hippodrome and the too-old ones that pull vegetable and fruit wagons have long since been eaten at capital dinner tables.

South of Santiago farmers raise horses for the market. But scarcity and transportation costs have driven up prices.

Horsemeat can be sold seven days a week without restriction. Butchers fear that the government may establish official prices to keep the meat within the income range of the poorer Chileans.

When broiled over charcoal a horsemeat steak has about the same consistency as a good beef steak. It is slightly

$400,000 Federal Blitz Teaches Facts of Life

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Almost $400,000 has been earmarked by the federal government to tell Canadians about the prevention of the facts of life.

The message — part of a nationwide advertising blitz by the Family Planning Federation of Canada — is invading the media, transit system and billboards across the country.

Responsibility

The blitz is being financed by a grant from the federal department of national health and welfare, said Brian Strehler, of Toronto, president of the federation which includes some 20 family planning associations across Canada.

"We are aiming our attack at the downtown core area residents, previously unaware of the family planning facilities available in most cities across Canada," he told The Times in a telephone interview.

"Too many people are not availing themselves of those facilities, especially the crisis-oriented people — those who rarely see a doctor, but only check into emergency wards when faced with a crisis.

"We know from experience," he added, "that there are even may localities in Canada where people are not being reached by family planning in any way."

He said reaction to the campaign — in some cases full-page newspaper ads — is favorable, although "it might be too progressive for some communities."

Dr. Dorothy Fisher, president of the 20-member Family Planning Association of Victoria, said the campaign is aimed at the general married middle-class public.

"We're frustrated," she said. "We'd like more married people to become aware of the facilities open to them so the fourth or fifth child, so often called "an afterthought" or "mistake", wouldn't happen."

Not Realistic

Awareness of population control, is another very real concern of the association, she said.

"Most people don't realize what will happen if Canada's population continues to increase the way it's going.

"People point to the huge expanse that is Canada as an argument against population control, but it's not a realistic argument," she said.

At a Family Planning Federation conference in Ottawa this December, she said, delegates will vote on a request to the federal government for a population policy for Canada.

Dr. Fisher protested a widespread feeling among the modern middle-class that it's wrong not to want children.

"It's not wrong not to want children," she argues.

"Too many women feel it's not human not to want children, and they're embarrassed about a perfectly natural feeling.

"Once we have more opportunities for women in the work force, there will be much less emphasis on having children."

The Association, which operates the Birth Control Clinic, at 1947 Cook St., helps about 500 new patients a year, she said.

A counselling service, operated by two Family and Children's Service social workers, was started last week.

The social workers see each of the new patients and problems are aired at group counselling sessions.

"The problems may not be sexual," said Dr. Fisher. "A lot have other problems beside birth control problems."

She said the move toward direct contact was taken when the association noticed that clinic patients who were referred to social workers rarely followed through on the referrals.

Doctors Urged to Study Population Problem

Canadian doctors aren't equipped to deal with family planning problems because of an outdated medical school curriculum, says a Victoria doctor who's been appointed co-ordinator of a national health and welfare study of the problem.

Dr. Harv Haakonson, an intern at Royal Jubilee Hospital, will work with three other doctors and a $15,721 federal grant to try to remedy the lack of family planning instruction in medical schools across the country.

Not all physicians are unprepared, Haakonson said.

"But if they know about sexology of marriage and normal sexual behavior in marriage, it is in spite of their education, not because of it.

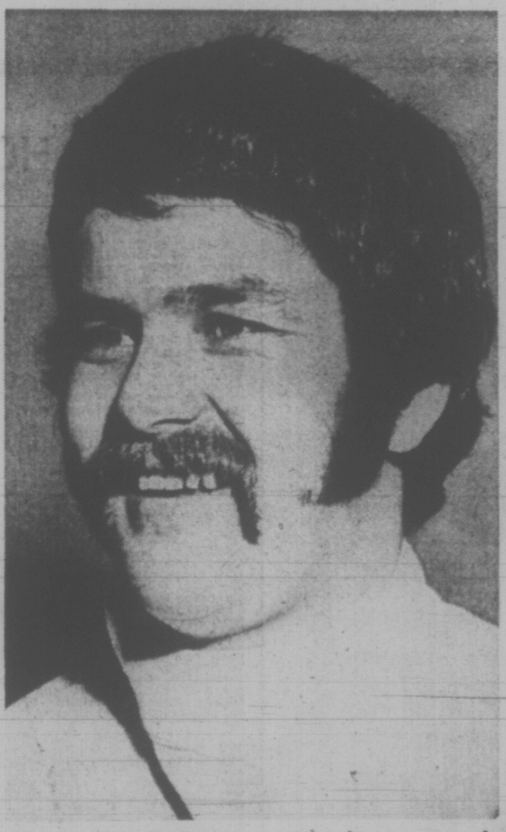
"Curriculum (in medical schools) has got to be changed to include the study of family planning. It should be taught but it isn't."

Haakonson said Canadian medical schools teach "a little background, but the subject should be dealt with in terms of the gravity of population problems as a whole."

He said private physicians are the first people an individual approaches in a move towards family planning.

"Until recently, the doctor's office has been the only place they could go, and a lot of doctors are uncomfortable talking about normal sex behavior in marriage because they have no training in it."

The purposes of the family planning grant include the organizing of a national conference of medical students to discuss the problems of family planning education, the publications of conference proceedings, and the preparation of possible teaching packages for medical schools.



Dr. Harv Haakonson co-ordinates study

Haakonson, a graduate of the University of Alberta Medical School in Edmonton last year, will work with Dr. Stanley Greenhill, of the University of Alberta's department of community medicine, Dr. Michael Ball, of the University of Alberta's health services department, and Dr. Cort Mackenzie, of the University of British Columbia's department of health care and epidemiology (cct).

Linda Jane Halliday, 24, a graduate of the University of Victoria, has been hired to do research before the conference, scheduled next June in either Edmonton or Ottawa.

Haakonson will spend a week in January touring medical schools to study students opinions on necessary additions to the school curriculum.

In June, one delegate from each of the country's 16 medical schools will meet, "to mesh ideas and get a consensus of opinion on methods of teaching family planning."

Haakonson said the group's suggestions will be published in a brochure and delivered to each of the schools.

"Although there will be no representation from members of the faculty, we hope to come up with alternative ways of adding the subject to the curriculum," Haakonson said.

He said members of university faculties have already expressed an interest in the project.

Haakonson received more than 120 applications from Victoria residents for the position of research assistant. He has urged unsuccessful applicants to get involved in family planning on a volunteer basis.

"Through the volunteers I hope to get more help with my project, and when the project is finished, the group could get involved in assisting the community along the family planning lines.

"I think there is a lot of work still left to do on the community level. People who really need family planning don't know how to get information or are reluctant.

"There has to be people working at the community level acting as a liaison between the birth control clinic and the community.

"The more interest, the more chance a lot of people in the lower socio-economic class are convinced they do need and want it (family planning)."

Dr. Dorothy Fisher, president of the Family Planning Association of Victoria, agrees there is a need for volunteers at the community level but stresses the need for organization.

Personal Privacy Proposed

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A Canadian government task force on information system and privacy will propose an unbreachable "privacy core" for every citizen, according to Communications Minister Robert Stanbury.

The proposed privacy core would "not be a legally enforceable right as such, but rather a new presumption in favor of the individual and of his privacy," Stanbury said.

Stanbury was delivering the Boland Memorial lecture at the 14th annual Canadian-American Seminar, sponsored by the University of Windsor.

With the concept of the "privacy core", said Stanbury, "an individual, instead of having to demonstrate why his or her privacy should not be invaded by governments, corporations, and public institutions, could instead demand that these organizations justify invasions actual or potential."

'Fabulous Jackie' Leaves Much to Be Believed

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL

Special to the Times

PARIS — Written in the best "What-the-Butler-Saw-Through-The-Keyhole" tradition, a new book recounts everthing you ever wanted to know — and perhaps more — about Jackie Onassis.

The hard work of one Christian Cafarakis, who was the steward aboard the Greek multimillionaire's yacht, "The Fabulous Jackie Onassis" is the sequel to an earlier volume entitled "The Fabulous Onassis."

Readers of such stuff will be delighted to know that a sequel to the sequel is hinted at in the final pages of the present 190-page volume: it will concern the love affair and hinted marriage between Alexander Onassis and Caroline Kennedy, a Romeo and Juliet story if there ever was one since the girl is only 14. Alexander is a long-in-the-tooth 22.

Not that such details deter the kind of people who read this brand of literature, but it is only fair to note that Cafarakis' more surprising revelations could be taken with a grain of salt.

Perhaps a copyreader's fixations on accuracy of easily verifiable facts is pure nit-picking. Nonetheless, the late President Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, not Houston as Cafarakis writes. Further, the jewelers with whom Onassis is said to do such business are called Van Cleef and Arpels and not Van Clift and Arpels. And Onassis' former wife, Tina, née Livanos, was married to the then Marquis of Blandford not the Duke of Blandford.

Limitless Funds

For those unbothered by such oversights, the current book reveals Jackie as a nail-biting tightwad when it comes to running her own household, (on $10 a day for food for family and help) but a spendthrift when ladling out her husband's seemingly limitless funds.

After all, it's not your average Greek millionaire who the week before his marriage spends $780,000 on jewelry at Zolotas' shop in Athens in just one hour.

Nor is it just anyone who in the previous two years showered his future wife with $600,000 worth of jewelry including seven watches, 18 necklaces, 23 bracelets, 17 brooches and more than 20 rings.

It will come as no shock therefore to learn that while on the Onassis private island of Skorpios three cows are maintained to provide milk baths for Jackie or that 24 hours a day she always has her favorite bottle of pink champagne within arm's reach. A special ice bucket is kept ouside her door at night and she even sips the stuff when democratically tending her vegetable patch on Skorpios.

Despite these connubial attentions, poor Aristotle in the early days of their marriage was a much-put-upon man. Jackie is an early riser. Ari, as he seems to be universally called by intimates, rarely gets up before noon. Moreover, his French sheets were prickly to the touch of his spouse so that she ordered American ones.

As a matter of record, Jackie is said to travel everywhere with a special suitcase of sheets and to instruct her maids to change them daily and even twice daily if she takes a nap.

She is decidedly finicky about animals. She forced Ari to get rid of the canary collection he maintained in his Avenue Foch, Paris, apartment because to her mind the birds were carriers of tuberculosis. On the other hand, she tried, unsuccessfully, to get Ari to buy a mink saddle blanket for daughter Caroline's wooden hobby horse, a gift of the Soviet government dating from her presidential days.

She's also got a thing about cut flowers because of the funerals of her husband and brother-in-law and prefers potted violets and lily of the valley.

She also has a medicine chest full of rows and rows of bottles for beauty products; pink pills to go to sleep, white ones to wake up, green for blood circulation, yellow for the liver and a series of bottles for every imaginable vitamin. Her maid is said to have calculated that Jackie swallows no less than 30 pills a day. Jackie also has six wigs from Alexandre, the top Paris hairdresser, because she feels her own locks are too thin.

'America's Children'

The contractual arrangements between Onassis man and wife cover not only their lifetimes, but also that of their children. Indeed, Aristotle Onassis is obliged to finance John-John's political expenses since Cafarakis reports that the 11-year-od boy wants to become president and the Ari considers him and his older sister Caroline as "America's children."

Ari tried to buy back Jack's yacht for John-John, but when the owner refused any price the Greek offered, another boat was bought. A submachine gun is hidden aboard just in case malefactors would want to do in the children.

Their keep is covered by $5,000 a month allowance. As for Jackie, she will inherit $100 million at Ari's demise and the contract guarantees her $10 million for every year of marriage were Ari to want a divorce.

If she wants out, she'll get a flat $20 million plus $180,000 for 10 years.

Cafarakis reports that in the first three months of marriage Jackie exaggerated. She spent $30,000 on clothes alone and $21,000 on doctors, medicines, beauty products, masseurs and hairdressers. At the end of the first year of their marriage she was calculated to have spent $580,000, Cafarakis claims, a mere drop in the golden bucket in view of the billion dollars supposedly at Ari's fingertips.

Nor does their contract simply cover matters in this world. Thanks to a process described as "cryogenisation," the couple should be in the best possible shape for rescucitation. Their corpses will be put in a lead casket filled with liquid nitrogen.

Whitewash

As for state secrets, Cafarakis discloses that Ari financed a 19-month investigation by private detectives into the death of President Kennedy shortly after his assassination. In 27 pages, the report is said to conclude the Warren Report was a whitewash and to reveal the names of J. F. K.'s assassin.

Just as Jackie was about to send the report off to President Johnson, a mysterious telephone caller warned her not to lest her life and that of her children be endangered.

Still, it comes as something of a letdown to learn from Cafarakis that Ari didn't really intend to marry Jackie at all. In fact, to believe Cafarakis, Ari was all set to remarry Tina after having decided against Maria Callas. But much to the anger of his children, he decided he had to go through with it after Jackie called.

Cafarakis writes that Ari felt that Jackie was not the kind of woman you could keep as a mistress. "His male honor said he could not turn back, Jackie would become his wife," is the way Cafarakis describes the momentous October, 1968, decision.

Tina was less upset than Alexander who was most rude to Jackie until he got interested in Caroline, apparently thereby betraying an old Onassis penchant since Ari married Tina when she was only 16. In any case, Tina is quoted as cooling her offspring by saying, "isn't it better he marry Jackie rather than Maria?"

Jackie a 'Nail-Biting Tightwad'?

Also reported furious was Jackie's sister, London-based Lee Radziwill. In fact when Jackie in the winter of 1968 told Bobby Kennedy about her love for the Greek, he sighed "it's a famly illness."

Cafarakis also reveals that one big dividend for Ari from the marriage is that he no longer has to cancel flights of his Olympic Airways to fly Jackie around. Now he just empties the first-class compartment.

Despite all these attentions, Ari has had to put up with Jackie firing members of his staff and rooting out any trace of Maria Callas, who decorated the Skorpios home.

Still, Ari has not been completely subjugated by Jackie.

He still goes out alone to hear his favorite Bouzouki players in Athens clubs at night or to drop in at Castel's or Regine's when in Paris.

And to how that he always remains faithful in his fashion, just a little more than a year after marrying Jackie, he decided to spend Christmas with her and New Year's Day with Maria Callas. And did.

Brand-Name Drugs Face Six-Man Investigation

OTTAWA (CP) — An independent committee has been appointed to investigate the comparative effects of different brands of similar drugs, it has been announced by the health department.

Six medical scientists will advise the department of national health and welfare on aspects of the bioavailability of drugs.

Different brands of the same drug may not be chemically identical and may therefore have different therapeutic effects.

The question is of concern at a time when many maintain that no doctors should be prescribing low-priced generic drugs rather than their higher-priced, brand-name equivalents.

Oriental Staple Moves West

Statistics Canada figures show that rice imports, polished white and brown, have almost doubled in a decade. Last year 1,801,963 hundredweights of the cereal crop were brought in. In 1960, the import figure was only a little over the million mark.

The vitamin thiamine is present in the cereal's outer husk — commercial polishing, or even washing the rice before cooking at home can reduce this water-soluble thiamine by as much as 75 per cent.

You'll still find, however, that the venerable Mrs. Beeton and even Larousse Gastronomique recommend pre-washing of rice.)

Many people mistakenly imagine you can substitute rice for potatoes. You can't replace a vegetable with a cereal, says Wolczuk, although she concedes that the Chinese "have been very clever" in the way they combine rice and green vegetables in many of their main dishes.

Half a cup of brown rice is the nutritional equivalent of one slice of whole wheat bread. In terms of calories, the weight watchers' doom signs, rice rates higher than bread. One slice of bread has 82 calories, a cup of brown rice 178 and white has 215.

Cost of rice per serving varies widely according to the type used. Slower-cooking brown rice works out at 2½ to 3 cents per serving, 3 cents for converted (processed after cooking) and rises to 6 cents for minute rice, 13 cents for commercially-packaged "mixed fried rice."

Rice is highly adaptable, being as good as a sweet as it is a main dish. Three tips worth remembering when cooking the cereal are:

- Never overcook rice. This destroys its valuable thiamine content.
- Don't reheat rice dishes. It's cheap enough to make another batch.
- Don't leave rice uncovered for any length of time. It is easily contaminated.

Pertinent Questions At Impertinent Times

I always meant to explain the facts of life to our son. It's just that he always asked his pertinent questions at such terribly impertinent times.

Whenever I was on the telephone talking long distance to my mother at twenty cents a word, he would invariably begin tugging at my skirt and frantically yelling, "Mommy, Mommy, where did I come from?"

Once in a crowded elevator he peered up at me and shouted, "How do you get babies?" The ensuring hush lasted for fifteen floors, while I tried to pretend that he was addressing the portly gentleman behind me.

But whenever I was just puttering around the house available, even eager, to discuss the facts of life, he was either at a neighbor's house building a fort out of empty gin bottles or in the back yard helping the dog bury bones in the pansies.

Last week I realized that he hadn't asked any question for the past two years. It was clearly time to take the initiative.

"You really should have a talk with Eric about the facts of life" I said to my husband.

"What do you mean?"

"You know, the birds and the bees. Work up to chickens, and end up with people."

"But I don't understand birds and bees and chickens. I just know people." After comparing misconceptions, it became obvious that neither one of us understood the finer points of birds, bees,or chickens.

"Why don't you try the garden analogy, planting seeds and so forth?" I suggested. Later that evening he took our son aside for a long talk. He reappeared in half an hour looking smug.

"How did it go?" I asked anxiously.

"Great. He's going to help me next time."

"He's going to what?!?!"

"He's going to help me with the garden. We're going to heve sweet potatoes and string beans and . . ."

"But what about the facts of life?" I interrupted.

"Oh, he knows all about that. In fact he even explained the part about birds and bees and chickens to me."

Free for the Asking

If you are a teenager who wants to be in demand as a reliable babysitter, you should read the 16-page "Sitting Safely" ("Gardiens prudents").

This booklet tells you how to avoid accidents and what to do if one occurs to one of your charges. It also urges you to make parents leave you detailed instructions and to tell you where you can reach them in an emergency.

In addition to being able to cope with minor emergencies and keeping your charge happy, a baby sitter should set up her own code of ethics.

Unless she has special permission, she should never invite a friend. She should never open the door to a stranger. She should never raid the refrigerator but only have the refreshments which were set aside for her.

Single copies can be requested from: Department WEN, Health and Welfare Division, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, 180 Wellington Street, Ottawa, Ontario KIP 5A3. Please allow at least four to six weeks for delivery.

Keep In Fridge

Manhood 'Lost'

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me if there is such a thing as a man losing his manhood? I hope you won't think I am stupid, but I am 59, and my husband is 60, and we have not had sexual relations for over 12 years.

When I asked our family doctor about it, he said it's possible for some men to lose their manhood at 40. Is this true? We asked a couple who have been close friends for a number of years if their sex lives had come to a halt, and they said their sex lives were better now than when they were younger. The man is 63 and the women is 61. Are they lying?

I am in good health and so is my husband. I am no sex maniac, but I really do believe my husband could do better by me if he tried. But how can I be sure he is capable of it? I don't want to make demands he can't fulfill. Keep this confidential, please.—Reader

DEAR READER: It's not normal for a healthy man to lose his manhood at 40. He should be examined physically again. If he's physically sound, his problem could be psychological. Be sure he covers all the bases. He has many good years ahead of him — and so have you!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl and have a question I hope you won't think is too dumb to answer. How do you get a boy to notice you? Not Very Pretty.

DEAR NOT: No question is too "dumb" to answer. You get a boy to notice you by noticing HIM. When he becomes aware that HE has been noticed by YOU, he'll notice you. And don't worry about being "not very pretty." A very wise man once said, "Beauty is a gift. Charm must be cultivated. A beautiful woman is one I notice. A charming woman is one who notices ME."

CONFIDENTIAL to "unmarried, preganant, and between two fires": Since you state you are morally against abortion, and your only problem is whether to keep the baby or put it out for adoption, I urge you to go to an organization called BIRTHRIGHT. They are very much concerned about women in your plight and will help you to make a decision you can live with. Good bless you.

9 IN MEMORIAM

CLARKE—In loving memory of our dear dad.
His smiling way and pleasant face are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day we know not when,
To clasp his hand in the better land,
Never to part again!
Who passed away Nov. 21, 1971 — Sadly missed by his children.

GRUNOW — In cherished and loving memory of a dear daughter, who passed away November 21st, 1970.
There's a face that is haunting as ever
There's a voice that we're longing to hear,
There's a smile we'll remember forever,
Though we try to forget every tear.
There's a sad but sweet remembrance.
There's a token of affection, dear Dede.
There's a memory fond and true,
And heartache still for you.
Nothing but memories as we journey on;
Longing for a smile from a loved one gone;
None knows the depth of our deep regret
But we remember when others forget.
—So sadly missed by your loving Mother, Sister Gerry and family, and Grandmother.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

A Study of Death and Dying

In the fall of 1965, the theology students of the Chicago Seminary approached the fine Swiss psychiatrist, Dr. Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, professor of Psychiatry at the University of Chicago, and asked her to help them in studying the psychology of dying persons. Dr. Ross and the students decided to talk to patients who were terminally ill. The students were to study the responses of these patients to questions, and to learn of their needs and evaluate their reactions.

Dr. Kubler-Ross and the students asked the hospital for permission to interview dying patients. At first, the hospital's doctors were afraid of the idea and opposed the project because they felt that it would be too upsetting to the patients. When, eventually, Dr. Ross and the students did get permission to meet with a dying patient, he welcomed them with open arms. As Dr. Ross says, "He invited us to sit down, and it was obvious that he was eager to speak."

One thing that Dr. Ross and the students soon found was that all the dying patients knew that they were in the terminal stage of their illness, even when they had not been told this by anyone.

Now, the program has proven to be so successful that doctors throughout the world are interested in learning about Dr. Kubler-Ross' program of helping dying patients.

Early, Dr. Ross became interested in a nice-looking young woman she calls Miss Y, who had a serious disease which had largely destroyed her kidneys. Miss Y had gone to three hospitals hoping to be attached to a kidney machine which could save her life, but all of the machines were in use. She knew her chances of living were very slim. At times, she became mentally confused, and often she felt her consciousness slipping away. She said, "A little pile of smoke would come over and I'd fall asleep."

Then, as the disease progressed, her vision began to fail, and she slept much of the time. Like many people who are dying, she kept wondering why God didn't come and get her now, and take her up out of her misery. She also wondered if the doctors weren't making too great an efforttosaveher life when they knew that they couldn't help her.

Turn him on to one of these beauties—French Provincial Mini-Manor or a folksy Bavarian chalet —both with 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, finished rec. rooms with fireplace, brand new on a brand new cul-de-sac, on Cordova Bay Ridge. STUDENT GUNMAN WOUNDS TWO IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — A high school teacher and a student were seriously wounded today when another student opened fire with a rifle at a school in nearby Boucherville before fatally shooting himself.

Police said a woman teacher and a student aged about 16 were taken to hospital in serious condition following the shooting at the Ecole Polyvalente de Mortagne, a comprehensive high school.

The student was struck twice in the body by the shots, police said.

The identities of those involved in the shooting were not released.

Tanks Battle in Mideast

By The Associated Press

Furious air, tank and artillery battles between Israel and Syria swirled along the Golan Heights ceasefire line today, and the Israeli military command announced that it had downed six Syrian jet fighters in aerial combat.

While Israeli and Syrian jets fought it out in the Middle East skies, the biggest tank battle since the 1967 Middle East war blazed away on the ground below.

Israeli jet pilots knocked down two MiG-21 planes earlier in the day then bagged another four as afternoon wore on, the military command said.

Syria said it lost one plane and downed two Israeli jets while Israeli spokesmen denied losing any.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv said no Israeli tanks were destroyed and there were no Israeli casualties.

Damascus radio, however, said 14 Israeli tanks were damanged in the fighting.

Syrian heavy artillery pounded Israeli positions along the ceasefire line, and gun and tank shells still were being traded in early afternoon, Damascus radio said.

In four separate waves, Israeli planes bombed and rocketed Syrian army and guerrilla bases. pounding artillery positions and an army radar station, the Israeli military command said.

The jet dogfight brought Syrian aircraft losses since the 1967 war to 39 planes by Israeli count. Israel claimed to have lost only three planes in fights against Syria since the war.

Two Soviet-built Syrian MiG-21s were shot down by the Israeli air force in the last major clash Nov. 9.

The fourth wave of Israeli planes bombed and stafed two Syrian camps in retaliation for continued shelling, a spokesman said.

Two Israeli civilians were wounded in the shellings, a spokesman said.

Meanwhile in the United Nations Israel told a tumultuous committee meeting Monday night that Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Libya, Algeria and Iraq bear the main responsibility for terrorism in the Middle East.

"The worldwide desire for action against terrorist activity applies above all to these governments," Ambassador Reuven Nall of Israel told the UN General Assembly's legal committee.

Arab delegates repeatedly protested that Nall was out of order as he levelled the charges in the debate on curbing international terrorism.

Nall was allowed to continue talking, but he was warned by the chairman, Erick Suy of Belgium, to limit himself to replying to earlier speakers since it was Israel's second speech in the debate.

IRON LUNG MOTHER GIVES BIRTH

Doctors attending Mrs. Milgate, 31, at the country town of Peak Hills, about 250 miles west of Sydney, said the delivery was normal and both mother and child were resting comfortably.

Cities Too Soft —Pollen

Canada's first tri-level conference on urban affairs has given municipalities little reason for optimism because the whole thrust of their approach to the federal government has been wrong, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

In a telephone interview from Toronto where he is one of 200 delegates attending the federal - provincial - municipal conference, Pollen said municipalities should have been working with the provinces to emphasize to the federal government the importance of revenue sharing.

But he said it was the feeling of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities (CFMM) that at the conference "we should not be at all aggressive or antagonistic, or have any confrontation.

"But if you have to fry an egg you have to break it," Pollen added.

As a result of the too-polite approach the federal government had responded by giving or promising "very little."

"They (the federal representatives) have been more

DUTY IN VIETNAM may be ahead for 200 members of the Canadian armed forces should Canada decide to take part in an international supervisory commission to police any ceasefire. Scenes like this one, taken in Ottawa, were commonplace Monday as men received shots to prevent tropical diseases. Locally, nine officers and four non-commissioned officers have been told to stand by.

MACKASEY ON WRIT

VANCOUVER (CP). — A writ was filed in federal court Monday alleging that Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey acted unconstitutionally in suspending the right of visitors to Canada to apply for landed imm igrant status.

Suraj Sander, a building contractor in Vancouver, said in an interview that the minister's move to plug the loophole was "invalid, ultra vires and unconstitutional because it violated the fundamental principle that Parliament and Parliament alone can change a major interpretation in any act."

"He's acting like a dictator. In this democratic system we can't give power to one minister to do what he likes without going through Parliament."

He said he wanted the court to impose a temporary stay on the minister's order until Parliament reconvenes.

Koreans Go to Polls Under Martial Law

By DON OBERDORFER
Washington Post

SEOUL — South Koreans go to the polls today to put the stamp of approval on a new national charter granting supreme and virtually unchecked power and unlimited tenure in office to President Park Chung-hee.

Though the new constitution represents a break with the recent past and a veering away from American-style parliamentary democracy, government officials reportedly expect at least 85 per cent approval. Under the circumstances, they may get that or even more.

The referendum is being held under martial law imposed by Park on Oct. 17, when he swept away the old constitution, dissolved the national assembly, imposed press censorship and sent troops and tanks into the streets, all by executive fiat.

The troops and tanks disappeared from view last Saturday night without announcement or explanation, but the state of "extraordinary martial law" continues.

The government has mounted an extensive campaign to explain and extol the proposed new charter, which was prepared by the Blue House (the president's office) and announced on Oct. 27. No word of opposition or even reservation has been permitted in public.

"Enlightenment teams" appointed by the government's Central Election Management Committee have fanned out across the country to smoothe the way for what has been officially named the "shiwol yushin" — in English, the "October revitalization" of the nation. According to informed sources, civilian officials and Korean military officers from field grade up have been directed to write 20 letters each in support.

Slogans praising the national "reforms" appear as subtitles on television programs, public service "commercials" on the radio, on streamers hanging from buildings and banners draped across streets, and in special type on the front pages and the crime-courts-government pages of every Korean language newspaper.

During a heavy rain this afternoon, well-dressed men identified by white armbands passed out pro-charter leaflets to citizens taking refuge in the pedestrian tunnels under Seoul's main thoroughfare. The leaflets bore such slogans as "without anyone slipping by, making the flowers of constitutional revitalization bloom with your vote" and "let's plant Korean-style democracy on our soil."

The opposition to the new regime, which undoubtedly exists, has not been heard. Leading figures of the opposition political parties and some religious and social leaders have been under house arrest or accompanied everywhere by Korean CIA agents. At one time or another, at least a dozen opposition political figures are reported to have been detained in government facilities.

At least 30 citizens have been tried and convicted in military courts martial for fabricating or circulating

Canada Won't Be U.S. Puppet

OTTAWA — Canada will not serve as a representative of the United States or any one side, should a peacekeeping role in Indochina be accepted.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp today laid down the conditions under which Canada would serve on any new supervisory commission in Vietnam—and heading the list is the requirement that the invitation come from all combatants in the warring country.

He met reporters after a one-day visit to New York Monday when he met U.S. secretary of State William Rogers to discuss the proposed peace commission.

Canada has made no commitment, he said. Instead, he "sought clarification" on the proposed make-up of the commission. And he made it clear that Canada would not be interested in joining the supervisory body unless the points on which he sought "clarification" were implemented.

Apart from the unanimous invitation, Canada also wants some higher authority established to receive the reports of the proposed commission: "You cannot have a successful commission without a higher authority to which to report."

It also must be shown that the procedures to be followed by any commission are "workable."

He said that since there is no agreement on the commission, the points he raised could not be answered. But "I am satisfied the United States understands our position" and he was confident the Canadian concerns would be taken into account during future negotiations.

Prime Minister Trudeau said earlier that Canada is not anxious to become involved in another ineffective role, such as its present membership on the International Control Commission (ICC) in Vietnam. Poland and India are the other two ICC members.

Sharp said Canada has

CUBA WILL TRY HIJACK TRIO

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three men who hijacked a Southern Airways jet too Cuba nine days ago will be tried in Havana on various charges, including extortion, the U.S. state department says.

U.S. officials said the hijackers violated Cuban law when they threatened to blow up the plane if authorities at Jose Marti airport refused a demand to refuel the craft.

The incident occurred during the first of two visits to Havana by the hijacked plane in the 29-hour odyssey involving 27 passengers and four crew members.

He said it is not unprecedented for a country to try accused persons and then extradite them.

Christmas Crowds Trapped in Blaze

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Fire thought to have started from rooftop Christmas decorations demolished a four-storey department store today, killing a number of shoppers and employees who were trapped in two crowded elevators.

The death toll was uncertain but 12 persons were known dead and scores were feared killed on the upper floors of the building.

The building was Robinson's Department Store, a landmark in Singapore opposite Raffles Place on the busy waterfront. The blaze demolished the store while persons trapped in the elevators screamed for help that was blocked by the intense heat.

ARRESTED IRA LEADER VOWS HUNGER STRIKE

DUBLIN (CP)— Sean MacStiofain, generally credited as the mastermind behind the Irish Republican Army's three-year guerrilla offensive in neighboring Northern Ireland, was charged today under the Irish Republic's Offences against the State Act.

In a brief court appearance during which he was ordered held until another court appearance Friday, MacStiofain protested his detention and said he is on a thirst and hunger strike.

"It is my intention to refuse food and liquid as long as I am in custody," he said.

Chicago 7 Convictions Reversed

CHICAGO (AP) — They 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed today the conviction of five of the so-called Chicago Seven defendants found guilty of crossing statelines to incite a riot during the 1968 Democratic party's national convention in Chicago.

In the ruling, however, the appeals court said the United States government may re-try the five.

The other two were found not guilty.

British MPs Protest Rules For Canadian Immigrants

LONDON (CP) — A Conservative member of Parliament has appealed to the government to ease new immigration regulations for Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders.

"On this festival day of loyalty," said John Biggs-Davison, referring to the Queen's silver wedding anniversary, "should we not be assured that our fellow subjects from Australia, Canada and New Zealand will be treated here as members of one family on the basis of reciprocity?"

He was one of a number of Conservatives who protested the "weakening" of historic ties.

Sir Bernard Braine, MP for an Essex riding, said the regulations were "unfair, stupid and in the long term shortsighted." Ten other Conservative MPs joined Braine in signing a motion of protest.

Biggs-Davison raised the point in the House of Commons Monday recalling that new immigration regulations coming into effect Jan. 1 will make it more difficult for Commonwealth citizens to obtain long-term job permits in Britain.

Julian Amery, a junior foreign office minister, countered that Commonwealth citizens will not be treated as aliens.

"They will continue to enjoy full rights here, including the right to vote, to hold public office and the right to join the police and armed forces."

As James Callaghan, Labor member and former home secretary, charged that Amery's reply was misleading, the foreign office minister insisted that "there is nothing in the new immigration rules to make it more difficult for Australians, Canadians or New Zealanders to come here or be less wecome."

Also in London, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said today he is "deeply concerned" about the effect in Canada of proposed new British rules.

Human Rights Take Beating

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Repression of basic human rights appears to be spreading throughout the world in alarming ways, says Amnesty International.

The human rights organization said Monday that its statistics show more people were detained and tortured for their political and religious beliefs thus far in 1972 than in any year since the organization began its work 10 years ago.

Interim reports indicate a record number of complaints has been filed with the organization's field offices regarding torture, detention without trial and mysterious disappearances.

These were reported by prof. James P. Harrison, the United States representative of the London-based private organization working for the release of "all prisoners of conscience."

He discussed the situation in an interview after presenting Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim with an appeal for the release of 12 prisoners in 12 countries. Amnesty International has consultative status with the United Nations.

Picked to dramatize violations of human rights, the dozen "symbolic" cases are part of thousands whose cases have been reported to the organization.

They include opponents of apartheid in South Africa, Jehovah's Witnesses in Spain, advocates of Formosan independence and critics of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Harris said the use of inhuman methods as a political tool seems to be spreading from Communist or Fascist countries to those with at least the appearance of a democratic system.

He listed the Philippines, Thailand and South Korea where martial law has been declared recently.

Harrison charged that in some countries, notably Brazil, Greece and South Africa, torture is used not only to obtain information but also to "terrorize the population."

Low Welfare Benefits Encourages Welfare—Cities

TORONTO (CP) — The federal and provincial governments were told that the country's welfare system pays benefits so low that recipients cannot break out of poverty.

Municipalities, in a brief to the first federal-provincial-municipal conference, said the welfare system is riddled with contradictions and encourages dependency, not initiative, among recipients.

"A welfare system should encourage self-initiative, not punish it; a welfare system should, ideally, be a process which leads to the elimination of the system itself, that is, the elimination of the need for welfare," the brief said.

The brief suggested that the federal government should consider assuming total financial responsibility for all income support programs for people on public assistance.

Also, work incentives for people on public assistance should be increased to encourage recipients to find at least part-time work, the brief said.

The municipalities' brief said the fundamental problem affecting public assistance policy is the failure to define who is a person in need.

"It allows individual welfare officers to define need in terms of their individual attitudes or arbitrary whims," the brief said.

The municipalities charged that higher unemployment, which increases welfare costs, is a direct result of federal actions.

"The municipalities and provinces must pay the cost of the resulting assistance, even though such costs result from unilateral federal actions," the brief added.

In another brief the municipalities say the federal government has placed too much emphasis on building new houses and not enough on rehabilitating old ones.

The brief also claimed the federal government's role in the provision of housing has been primarily that of a banker.

"The result of the housing programs have not been satisfactory," it said. "The focus has been almost exclusively on the production of new units.

"No effort has been taken to examine the needs of those living in older housing stock to assist in upgrading the dwellings.

Municipalities also called for a tri-level organization that would plan and finance urban transportation systems.

The brief said Canada will become increasingly urbanized to an extent where urban problems and the problem of urban transportation will become more acute.

Local governments do not have the financial base to initiate significant expenditures on comprehensive transportation systems, it added.

In the field of finances, faith in federalism is being undermined by the growing problems facing municipalities.

One of the series of municipal briefs requested that future meeting of federal, provincial and municipal governments examine financial resources of their three levels of government.

The document was critical of a federal move to enter the property tax field by levying a capital gains tax on homeowners. This further eroded municipal financial resources which were not growing as rapidly as the tax field belonging to federal and provincial governments.

"Local institutions face the threat of becoming less and less relevant and this has contributed to the growing skepticism toward federalism in Canada."

political and contriving than straightforward and co-operative," Pollen went on.

While both provincial and municipal delegates have been asking for more money to spend on urban development the federal representatives have been claiming that "the BNA is not a sacred cow and we feel we can go into the urban areas and do our own urban thing."

Pollen said that attitude proved "a real shocker" to the provinces who jealously regard municipalities as part of their constitutional jurisdiction and therefore free from federal intrusion.

"If you don't have constitutional clarity and definition of areas of responsibility you don't have any discipline in administration, and therefore none in financing," Pollen added.

Main pourpose of the three-day conference, which winds up late today, is to establish machinery for permanent consultation on urban matters between the federal, provincial and municipal governments.

Pollen said the CFMM had suggested setting up a secretariat for this purpose but this had been "shot down" by the provinces who looked with abhorrence on the possible creation of new arm of bureaucracy.

offered to place its 19-man ICC contingent at the disposal of the new commission in the initial period preceding a conference.

He said there have been consultations with other party leaders in Canada about the proposed commission.

In Washington last week, a U.S. state department spokesman was quoted as saying there was "agreement in principle" from four countries regarding participation in the commission. They were identified as Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland.

But Sharp said today that this was not accurate so far as Canada is concerned. He first had to establish the type of commission involved and the conditions under which it would operate. This was the reason for his talks with Rogers.

In Paris, Henry Kissinger and North Vietnam's Le Duc opened their second closed-door peace meeting in a suburban villa.

The meeting took place in the same closely guarded two-storey villa at Gif-sur-Yvette, 15 miles southwest of Paris, where the two met for 5½ hours Monday. French sources said the villa is the property of the French Communist party.

Kissinger opened what could be the final phase of his negotiations with Tho Monday.

On the war front, ground action in South Vietnam intensified as the ceasefire negotiations continued. Communist forces shelled Da Nang before dawn and made a series of hit-and-run attacks in the Saigon region. Heavy fighting was reported for the fifth successive day just south of the demilitarized zone and there also was hard fighting in the central highlands below Pleiku.

In the continuing battle for territory along the northern frontier, the North Vietnamese fired more than 1,000 artillery and mortar shells into the South Vietnamese marines trying to drive north from Quang Tri City.

"groundless rumors," which is an offence under the martial law decree. According to public announcements, a Yongdungpo merchant was sentenced to three years in prison for "defaming the chief executive" and spreading rumors while talking about the "October revitalization." A Seoul diary farmer was sentenced to three years imprisonment for writing a letter to an assemblyman urging a fight against the "reforms."

The previous constitution limited the presidential tenure to three terms and would have required Park to step aside in 1975 — but the new constitution contains no such limit. This is considered the most fundamental of all the charter changes by many foreign and domestic observers here, but the press has not been permitted to make it plain. Newspapers have been warned not to draw comparisons of their own between the old constitution and the proposed new charter, and have limited themselves to printing unsigned explanations of the need for the "revitalization."

The press submits to daily censorship, though the previously obligatory "passed by censor" labels have been dropped from newspaper pages. When the government objected to a headline carried in the Dong-a Ilbo, one of Seoul's most respected daily papers, an editor and two makeup men were taken into custody for 24 hours of questioning and some of them were beaten.

Under the proposed new charter, the president will no longer be popularly elected, being chosen instead by the more than 2,000 members of a "National Conference for Unification." This group in turn will be elected — probably between Dec. 10 and Dec. 15 — under procedures yet to be announced. Local government officials and local units of the ruling Democratic-Republican party are said to be preparing lists of approved candidates, who will be checked out by the government security services before being permitted to run.

Service Might Have Saved Ernie

The Refrigeration Service Engineers' Society has offered to defuse potential death traps created by abandoned refrigerators, but few, if any, have made use of the offer.

"In an air-tight fridge, a child will suffocate in 15 to 30 minutes," said Hagedorn. "The society has offered to remove doors from abandoned refrigerators free of charge. We've offered this as a public service for several years now, but I don't think anyone has ever used it."

The boy's body was discovered in the back yard of the Roy Kirby residence at 1138 Lockley by Peter Harrington, of 1139 Lockley.

Approximately 50 men combed acres of woodland in the Gorge - Esquimalt area after Ernie wandered from his home at 1201 Colville about 5 p.m., Sunday.

The search was hampered by Ernie's inability to speak.

He attended George Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, said Whitcomb.

The Kirby residence had been empty for the weekend and Mrs. Mildred Flack, of 1142 Lockley, returned home about 5:30 p.m. Sunday and noticed the refrigerator lying on its back where it had been standing upright since September, police said.

She called Harrington Monday and asked if he would investigate. He found the body at 1:30 p.m.

"There should be legislation making unlawful the abandonment of refrigerators," said Ald. Noel.

Municipal solicitor Douglas Patterson said the matter would come under the jurisdiction of the provincial legislature.

Oil Firms Sign Agreement To Help Protect Harbor

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

After two years of negotiation oil companies on the Inner Harbor have signed an agreement with the City of Victoria to provide better fire protection and minimize oil spills in the area.

Victoria Deputy Fire Chief Carl Coates said today "the contract has been signed and accepted by the companies and the city."

Fire protection in the area has been "adequate" in past years but now the oil company sites will have the most modern equipment on the market, said Coates.

The companies involved, Imperial Oil on the west side of the harbor, Gulf Oil and Shell Oil on the north, Texaco on the south, and Standard Oil with two sites, one on the north and one on the south, have agreed to subsidize Victoria Fire Department to purchase the "most modern" fire extinguishing equipment available, Coates said.

The equipment consists of a "mobile foam proportioning system and monitor nozzles. It's a trailer unit," said Coates.

"It requires no more than the normal complement ahd truck and is capable of dealing with fires at storage tanks, tank yards, wharves, tank-trucks, and any fires requiring foam extinguishing equipment," he said.

"The tank holds 500 gallons of aero-O-foam, a liquid foam concentrate, and pumps out 4,000 gallons of foam per minute. It can reach 180 feet from the nozzle," said Coates.

Better Than Fixed System

The trailer unit and 200 gallons of "stand-by stock" will be kept at Victoria fire department.

The trailer also has a "demountable monitor nozzle for use in areas where the truck can't go. The mobile equipment is more effective than any fixed system," said Coates.

The unit is worth $24,000 and the balance of money will be used to purchase the foam concentrate at $11.90 a gallon.

In addition to the extinguishing equipment, the oil companies have bought 1,600 feet of "oil fence boom," made of nylon weighted logs.

Each log is 100 feet long and two feet high. The underside of each log is weighted to keep it "half submerged" barring off any possible escape routes for oil spilled in the harbor, said Coates.

The logs are located at the Shell Oil wharf where they can be easily towed by boat to any part of the harbor.

Another contract provision is the upgrading of firefighting equipment on the actual sites to "current standards," said Coates.

A fire hose and dry chemical extinguisher will be placed at each loading bay.

At each truck loading rack "shut-off valves" will be operated by remote control. Thermal-detector switches or heat-sensing devices shut down the pumping system and activate the remote-controlled shut-off valve.

As another contract condition, the fire department will "provide training in flammable liquid firefighting for tank farm personnel," said Coates.

Victoria Beauty Defends Contests

It's Miss, Not Ms. Canada

Beauty contests don't degrade women, nor are they in opposition to women's liberation, Victoria's Gillian Regehr said today from Toronto where she was crowned Miss Canada Monday night.

"They don't degrade women at all," she said in a phone interview from Toronto, just hours after winning the national beauty crown.

"They bring women out," she added, "and it's not just based on beauty. It's based on femininity, personality, poise and intellect.

"It definitely doesn't mean we're sex symbols," she said. "Me, a sex symbol?"

The 18-year-old brunette won the Miss Canada pageant Monday night over 28 other aspirants from across the country.

The youngest and tallest contestant, she won over the panel of judges with a ballet interpretation of the love theme from Romeo and Juliet in the talent contest.

Miss Regehr admitted she held true to tradition and burst into tears of joy as she was crowned by last year's queen, Donna Sawicky of Kitchener.

"I was just so surprised," she said this morning shortly before appearing on a Toronto television show. "I never thought I'd be chosen.

"It was super — a beautiful evening.

"When people approached me to run for Miss Victoria I thought they were nuts," she said with a laugh, "but I thought about it for a long time and decided it couldn't hurt, so why not try."

As 26th winner of the pageant, the five-foot, nine-inch beauty will receive $35,000 in prizes, including a $10,200 chinchilla coat, $5,200 in cash, a $1,200 scholarship, a snowmobile, grand piano, a car and wardrobe.

"I don't even know all the things I've won," she said.

"I've won a fashion award and a scholarship, I know, and I'll put the money in the bank to save it for modelling school."

Miss Regehr said she has "just mostly been dancing" at Wynne Shaw Dance Studio since she finished school, but hopes to do further study in the field of fashion and become a professional model.

She will move to Toronto next week, however, as a home base for her activities as Miss Canada.

First on her agenda will be a trip across Canada.

Other runners-up are Marilyn Smith, 18, of Vancouver, Lise Leclerc, 22, of Quebec City, and Patricia Mazurick, 21, of Toronto.

Miss Congeniality — chosen by her fellow competitors — is Alanna Payne of Nova Scotia.

Judged for the pageant, which was broken up into three parts: the evening gown, the bathing suit and the talent contests, were actor Gordon Pinsent, Robert Dubberley, general manager of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Edith Serei, a Montreal broadcaster, Pat Gwyer, a Toronto fashion consultant, and Arto Cavouk, a Toronto photographer.

Dailly to Check Improper Spending

The honeymoon between Mrs. Eileen Dailly and the school boards of British Columbia has undergone its first tiff.

The new NDP minister of education has learned that some school boards which received "emergent operating expenses" a few weeks after she took charge are abusing the privilege.

In a letter circulated to school boards Nov. 10 and received by Greater Victoria board Monday night, Mrs. Dailly says some districts given mooney for hiring more teachers have instead been spending the money on building repairs.

The minister says her department will "obtain detailed reporting" of how school boards have spent their shot-in-the-arm allowances.

Any school boards found to have used the money otherwise than it was supposed to be spent will find their approvals rescinded and financial assistance by the government cancelled, Mrs. Dailly says.

The minister, in proposing relaxation of restraints imposed on school boards by the Socred government, told the fall session of the legislature she had the greatest confidence in the wisdom of trustees up and down the province.

Exactly how much was granted to school districts under the emergency scheme was not immediately available.

Greater Victoria school board did not request any extra allowance.

$12,000 For UVic

The University of Victoria will receive a $12,000 grant for a heart fitness survey.

The grant was part of more than $70,000 announced today by the federal health department for recreation and fitness groups.

Two YMCA projects in Montreal will receive about half the money. The Association des Scouts du Canada will receive $9,000 to develop scouting among French-speaking youngsters in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward island.

Rink Issue Warming Up

Dec. 9 Vote Would Mean Defeat—Curtis

The Saanich mayor was replying to Alan Newberry who said late Monday inquiry into a privately-owned arena for this area is a side issue and should not be allowed to sidetrack the electorate from a referendum to borrow for a publicly-owned rink.

"Ald. Newberry is casting about for an election issue," Curtis said, referring to a visit arranged by Saanich to the Burnaby complex of Columbian 4-Rinks Ltd., now under construction.

The firm has exhanged information with Saanich council and administration on a non-committal, informal basis.

Saanich should confine its role with Columbian to cooperation without making the private developer a side issue, Newberry said.

The mayor and three aldermen, senior staff and representatives from adjoining municipalities plan to inspect the Burnaby project Friday afternoon.

"None of us are convinced that a private development in Saanich or elsewhere in Greater Victoria is viable," Curtis said.

"We've listened carefully to the people from Burnaby and now we're going to have a look at it."

Curtis, along with aldermen Edith Gunning, Frank Waring and William Campbell, opposed the presentation of a borrowing referendum "at the earliest opportunity" as favored by Newberry and the remaining four members of council.

Meanwhile, the time necessary to prepare and approve a borrowing bylaw has expired as far as the Dec. 9 election is concerned.

Municipal clerk Gordon Hayward said today there is sufficient time to draw up a referendum solely for an expression of opinion by the Saanich electorate, but not to seek capital funds.

"To put a referendum on Dec. 9 would ensure its defeat," Curtis said. "Is that what he wants?"

MANAGER RESIGNS FROM SYMPHONY

Resignation of Carl E. Simmons as manager of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra has been regretfully accepted, according to an announcement by symphony president John di Castri.

The resignation will take effect Dec. 31.

Simmons was appointed to the post in July, 1972, with the understanding that he would be allowed an exploratory period of three months to assess the position.

There are no immediate plans for his replacement.

Whitbread Pitches in to Eliminate Academy Woes

After a 40-minute secret session with Oak Bay council Monday night senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has agreed to help Victoria Riding Academy officials rectify a health hazard situation.

Mayor Frances Elford said today Whitbread has promised to meet with academy managers, Don and Aileen Carley, and others:

"He will explain what must be done to eliminate the immediate problem before the next warm season."

Reporters covering the open council meeting that preceded the in-camera one with Whitbread rejected a bid by Ald. John Goult to allow them to sit in on the secret session, providing they didn't print any of the proceedings.

The reporters refused the bid on the grounds it would prevent them reporting on matters they might feel were of public interest.

Goult said today, "The reason I did it was because there has been a lot of comment both in the press and out of the press on the way the inspection was done and the report submitted. I wanted the press to know exactly what had been going on."

★ ★ ★

The secret meeting was called to consider the demands in Whitbread's report which he had written should be met by Feb. 28.

In the open session Ald. Shirley Dowell reiterated that no member of council had been aware of the inspection (carried out on Oct. 23, two days after the Carleys were hospitalized after a car accident) until they were presented with the report.

She said that after she knew of the report she had phoned Whitbread and been told he had made the inspection on the request of council. The request, she said, was supposed to have come from municipal-administrator E. H. Hart.

Goult asked the mayor if she had instructed Hart to do this. She said no. Hart denied having made the request.

Asked to clarify the situation today, Mayor Elford said the inspection had been instigated by Don Wakelyn, sanitary inspector for Oak Bay and part of Victoria.

She said that Wakelyn had visited the riding academy in August and September because of complaints received from residents on Henderson. There had also been complaints about flies from people using the pavilion and tennis courts at Henderson Park, as well as from the principal of the Uplands elementary school.

★ ★ ★

"When he realized that, with the use of volunteer help and the age of Mr. and Mrs. Carley, things had got beyond them, he felt he had to report to his superior (Whitbread)."

Asked if the Feb. 28 deadline would be enforced, Mayor Elford said it had not exactly been waived "but the matter may be corrected before then."

She said that most of the problem had come from a six-month pile of manure that had been pushed back into the bushes instead of being carted away, becoming a breeding place for flies and rats.

Goult said that Whitbread had promised to "attempt to find a common solution" and that most of the problems were housekeeping ones that could quite simply be dealt with.

At the open meeting, Goult had said it seemed odd that Whitbread's report "was delivered to us and not the tenant".

Mrs. Elford explained today that Wakelyn and Whitbread felt council should have a full report before the Carleys were contacted.

'Sea Water' May Flow From Sidney Taps

Distilled sea water may become the drink of the future for Sidney residents.

Ronald Upward, chief commissioner of the Greater Victoria Water Board, outlined this possibility Monday to 40 people at a Camosun College noon forum at the Provincial Museum.

A sea water distillery in Sidney could in seven or eight years be more economical than running a 14-mile pipeline from Thetis Lake to the Saanich Penninsual community of 5,000, Upward said.

Cost of distilling sea water has dropped to about 60 cents per 1,000 gallons, he said. And there should be further drastic decreases in the cost of distilling sea water unless the rising cost of energy needed in the distilling process affects the price, he added.

By the time a pipeline to Sidney was built, cost per 1,000 gallons would be about 30 cents, said Upward, and this could be changed by steadily increasing construction costs.

If a pipeline were built connecting Sidney to the Greater Victoria water supply system, he said, the 5,000 Sidney users couldn't possibly pay for the cost of construction.

It is also questionable whether the four municipalities that own the water system — Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay — would be prepared to pick up the tab.

Water shortages in summer in Sidney have in recent years caused warm weather restrictions on the use of water.

HOUSEWIVES SUCCEED IN HALTING AIRPORT

DUNCAN — Construction on the new airport in Glenora will be halted until residents and the society can come to an agreement, Cowichan Airport Society president Jim Painter said today.

A group of about 30 Glenora housewives picketed the 40-acre site last week when a bulldozer arrived to start levelling the strip. Residents have been opposing the project for more than a year.

The Cowichan Valley Regional Board, which leased the land to the society, is committed to the project through a five-year lease signed by both parties last November.

Sport's Centre Planned

A $1.3 million convention centre and sports complex is planned by a group of businessmen who applied to Central Saanich council Monday for rezoning of rural farmland on Mt. Newton Cross Road.

Alec Izaat, 7997 Turgoose Terrace, spokesmen for the 16-member group, said that 18 acres have been purchased for the complex which will be built by private funds. No subsidies will be required and the complex will be open to the public on a general admission basis, added Izaat.

"People are fed to the teeth with municipally-operated arenas," explained Izaat in an interview later. "Privately operated centres are now paying dividends because they can be more efficientlly operated."

Plans include a 50-metre indoor pool, and 85-foot by 200-foot skating arena, and eight curling sheets. The ice rink will be a year-around operation but will be covered with a wooden floor. Curling space will be used out of season for roller skating, lacrosse and meetings.

A two-storey central core will provide administrative and concession space and lounges with a view of main floor activities. About 3,000 spectators will be accommodated.

The site is considered to be the best of eight locations covered by the group. It is eight miles from Swartz Bay and Royal Oak, four miles from Sidney and Brentwood, and this location, said Izaat, ensures complete utilization.

Izaat, a keen hockey referee and former competitive swimmer, said that his group found little difficulty in raising funds for the "one stop complex".

"Recreation and leisure-time industry is the fastest growing business today," he said.

Projections of revenue and operational costs indicate that admission prices will be identical to similar structures in Victoria and Izaat predicts that the centre can be in operation by late spring.

"Peninsula kids and school districtt 63 will have first crack at ice time," promises Izaat.

Mud Makes Muscle

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) —Ellington Darden, a babyfaced PhD with Mr. America's muscles, says the secret to a strong, healthy body is as clear as mud.

"It's a pretty unique feeling," the 29-year-old Darden says, "I guess it's like the difference between drinking a glass of water and a thick milkshake."

With a PhD in physical education from Florida State in hand, Darden is studying for another doctoral degree in foods and nutrition. The six-foot, 195-pound former college football tackle has won more than 100 trophies in weightlifting and body-building competitions.

Newsletter Pins Premature Title

Greater Victoria school trustee Walter Donald moved Monday night that the current edition of Info, the district's newsletter, be scrapped and rewritten.

He said a diagram of the redesigned administration showed an individual in the position of executive assistant to the superintendent of schools — "a position which has not been approved by the board."

The newsletter, distributed to 1,500-2,000 school district employees, shows Jack Dalgleish as executive assistant to A. J. Longmore.

"I'm happy this individual is on the team," Donald said," but I feel very strongly this newsletter should be withdrawn."

Trustee Peter Bunn said the word "acting" before Dalgleish's position would have solved the situation.

Open-Pit Mining Slammed in Saanich

J. R. Gillespie, 119 Helmcken Road, owns a hangar on the private air strip nearby and describes the gravel mining operation as "a disese which is eating awy this district."

There are a number of gravel pits behind Keating Cross Road, one municipally owned and two privately owned. Gravel has been excavated for 40 years.

Gillispie maintains that although the area is industrially zoned, municipal bylaws do not cover mining and no extraction fees or royalties are charged.

Local taxpayers should have a voice in the matter, urged Gillespie, "stop for a moment and get the law straightened out."

Dereck Mallard, peninsular SPEC president, backed Gillespie's appeal by asking if council has given consideration to a bylaw covering environmental protection for reclamation of pits.

Mayor A. M. Galbraith said the municipality does have zoning bylaws to cover surface activities and a gravel pit bylaw which was adopted after a public hearing.

Oil, Gas Found Off Africa

LONDON (Reuter) — Potential offshore oil and gas fields that could rival those in the Gulf of Mexico have been charted off the west coast of southern Africa.

They are thought to be to deep for economic exploitation at present, but new technology could make them accessible within the next 10 years, scientists say.

News of the finds was reported in the latest edition of Science magazine by a team from the Woods Hole oceanographic institution at Bedford, Mass.

The institution's research vessel Atlantis found the potential oil and gas deposits during a series of cruises up and down the coast between January and July, ranging from the tip of Africa up to the mouth of the Congo River.

There were two distinct "finds." One was a ridge of sediment tracing the ancient delta of the River Orange, which marks the southern border of South-West Africa with South Africa, and the other was a large field of salt domes off the coast of Angola.

Salt domes are characteristic "traps" for oil in several large oil fields, particularly the Middle East and Gulf of Mexico fields. They also occur on land.

The delta deposits apparently began forming soon after the continents of Africa and South America split and drifted apart early in geologic history. The bulging ridge of sediment now stretches about 600 miles northwest from Cape Town roughly parallel with the coast.

"Within the delta," oceanographer K. O. Emery says in his preliminary report, "are probably numerous stratigraphic traps capable of retaining oil and gas if they are present."

He says he believes the sediments are between 30 million and 130 million years old.

The waters that cover them range from about 300 to 12,000 feet.

Until comparatively recently, more than 300 feet was regarded as probably too deep for economic exploitation. But new rigs, and new developments promise to lower this level considerably within the fairly near future.

There are multiple other factors being considered, including the distance from shore.

The salt domes discovered off the Angolan coast lie at depths of between 2,400 and 10,000 feet and cover an area about half that of the fields in the Gulf of Mexico. They appear to be quite separate from the productive salt domes in Angola and Gabon.

STUDENT GUNMAN WOUNDS TWO IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — A high school teacher and a student were seriously wounded today when another student opened fire with a rifle at a school in nearby Boucherville before fatally shooting himself.

Police said a woman teacher and a student aged about 16 were taken to hospital in serious condition following the shooting at the Ecole Polyvalente de Mortagne, a comprehensive high school.

The student was struck twice in the body by the shots, police said.

The identities of those involved in the shooting were not released.

Tanks Battle in Mideast

By The Associated Press

Furious air, tank and artillery battles between Israel and Syria swirled along the Golan Heights ceasefire line today, and the Israeli military command announced that it had downed six Syrian jet fighters in aerial combat.

While Israeli and Syrian jets fought it out in the Middle East skies, the biggest tank battle since the 1967 Middle East war blazed away on the ground below.

Israeli jet pilots knocked down two MiG-21 planes earlier in the day then bagged another four as afternoon wore on, the military command said.

Syria said it lost one plane and downed two Israeli jets while Israeli spokesmen denied losing any.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv said no Israeli tanks were destroyed and there were no Israeli casualties.

Damascus radio, however, said 14 Israeli tanks were damaged in the fighting.

Syrian heavy artillery pounded Israeli positions along the ceasefire line, and gun and tank shells still were being traded in early afternoon, Damascus radio said.

In four separate waves, Israeli planes bombed and rocketed Syrian army and guerrilla bases, pounding artillery positions and an army radar station, the Israeli military command said.

The jet dogfight brought Syrian aircraft losses since the 1967 war to 39 planes by Israeli count. Israel claimed to have lost only three planes in fights against Syria since the war.

Two Soviet-built Syrian MiG-21s were shot down by the Israeli air force in the last major clash Nov. 9.

The fourth wave of Israeli planes bombed and strafed two Syrian camps in retaliation for continued shelling, a spokesman said.

Two Israeli civilians were wounded in the shellings, a spokesman said.

Meanwhile in the United Nations Israel told a tumultuous committee meeting Monday night that Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Libya, Algeria and Iraq bear the main responsibility for terrorism in the Middle East.

"The worldwide desire for action against terrorist activity applies above all to these governments," Ambassador Reuven Nall of Israel told the UN General Assembly's legal committee.

Arab delegates repeatedly protested that Nall was out of order as he levelled the charges in the debate on curbing international terrorism.

Nall was allowed to continue talking, but he was warned by the chairman, Erick Suy of Belgium, to limit himself to replying to earlier speakers since it was Israel's second speech in the debate.

Cities Too Soft —Pollen

Canada's first tri-level conference on urban affairs has given municipalities little reason for optimism because the whole thrust of their approach to the federal government has been wrong, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

In a telephone interview from Toronto where he is one of 200 delegates attending the federal - provincial - municipal conference, Pollen said municipalities should have been working with the provinces to emphasize to the federal government the importance of revenue sharing.

But he said it was the feeling of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities (CFMM) that at the conference "we should not be at all aggressive or antagonistic, or have any confrontation.

"But if you have to fry an egg you have to break it," Pollen added.

As a result of the too-polite approach the federal government had responded by giving or promising "very little."

Gov't to Foot College Tab

The provincial government will take over 100 per cent of capital financing ot community colleges in the next fiscal year, Education Minister Eileen Dailly announced today.

Daily also announced that an advisory commission on the integration of all post-secondary education will be named by the government.

The integration of the province's higher learning facilities was the major recommendation of the once-controversial Perry report, commissioned by the former government but never released or even commented upon.

Dailly said the report is now out of date because of the growth of the post-secondary education field, but the integration of these services the government accepts completely.

Taking over all capital financing for colleges means local school district taxpayers will not have to face referendum votes for these costs.

The government anticipates an expenditure of about $10 million in the first fiscal year of the new formula, which will be introduced in legislative form at the winter session of the B.C. House.

Dailly said also that the ultimate aim is for the province to take on all operating costs of colleges, but set no deadline for this change.

Dailly met representatives of the community colleges earlier today to inform them of the changes in financing.

She told them also that in future the government will take more interest in the geographical location of new colleges, which up until now were built only with the approval of local ratepayers.

Dailly told a press conference that the old method of locating colleges did not serve the students well.

The advisory commission on post-secondary education will be named in a few weeks, Dailly said.

Its first task will be to develop legislation which would probably not be introduced until a year from now, at a fall session, at the earliest.

Another major task of the commission will be the formation of a new board to advise on a continuing basis on higher education.

It would be called a "post-secondary board."

"The past decade has been marked by a rapid expansion of post-secondary education institutions — from a single university and two-year college and very limited vocational facilities to two additional public universities, nine colleges, an institute of tech-

U.S. officials said the hijackers violated Cuban law when they threatened to blow up the plane if authorities at Jose Marti airport refused a demand to refuel the craft.

Canada Won't Be U.S. Puppet

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canada will not serve as a representative of the United States or any one side, should a peacekeeping role in Indochina be accepted.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp today laid down the conditions under which Canada would serve on any new supervisory commission in Vietnam—and heading the list is the requirement that the invitation come from all combatants in the warring country.

He met reporters after a one-day visit to New York Monday when he met U.S. secretary of State William Rogers to discuss the proposed peace commission.

Canada has made no commitment, he said. Instead, he "sought clarification" on the proposed make-up of the commission. And he made it clear that Canada would not be interested in joining the supervisory body unless the points on which he sought "clarification" were implemented.

Apart from the unanimous invitation, Canada also wants some higher authority established to receive the reports of the proposed commission: "You cannot have a successful commission without a higher authority to which to report."

It also must be shown that the procedures to be followed by any commission are "workable."

And the fourth and final condition is that such a commission be given freedom of movement.

Sharp said the proposed commission would not be a military peace-keeping operation, but a supervisory commission which would "observe and report."

He said that since there is no agreement on the commission, the points he raised could not be answered. But "I am satisfied the United States understands our position" and he was confident the Canadian concerns would be taken into account during future negotiations.

Prime Minister Trudeau said earlier that Canada is not anxious to become involved in another ineffective role, such as its present membership on the International Control Commission (ICC) in Vietnam. Poland and India are the other two ICC members.

Sharp said Canada has

Martial Law Election in Korea

By DON OBERDORFER

Washington Post

SEOUL — South Koreans go to the polls today to put the stamp of approval on a new national charter granting supreme and virtually unchecked power and unlimited tenure in office to President Park Chung-hee.

Though the new constitution represents a break with the recent past and a veering away from American-style parliamentary democracy, government officials reportedly expect at least 85 per cent approval. Under the circumstances, they may get that or even more.

The referendum is being held under martial law imposed by Park on Oct. 17, when he swept away the old constitution, dissolved the national assembly, imposed press censorship and sent troops and tanks into the streets, all by executive fiat.

The troops and tanks disappeared from view last Saturday night without announcement or explanation, but the state of "extraordinary martial law" continues.

The government has mounted an extensive campaign to explain and extol the proposed new charter, which was prepared by the Blue House (the president's office) and announced on Oct. 27. No word of opposition or even reservation has been permitted in public.

ARRESTED IRA LEADER VOWS HUNGER STRIKE

DUBLIN (CP)— Sean MacStiofain, generally credited as the mastermind behind the Irish Republican Army's three-year guerrilla offensive in neighboring Northern Ireland, was charged today under the Irish Republic's Offences Against The State Act.

In a brief court appearance during which he was ordered held until another court appearance Friday, MacStiofain protested his detention and said he is on a thirst and hunger strike.

"It is my intention to refuse food and liquid as long as I am in custody," he said.

The English-born guerrilla leader was arrested in Dublin early Sunday and charged with being a member of an illegal organization.

Chicago 7 Cleared

CHICAGO (AP) — They 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed today the conviction of five of the so-called Chicago Seven defendants found guilty of crossing statelines to incite a riot during the 1968 Democratic party's national convention in Chicago.

The court said the defendant's constitutional rights had been violated.

In the ruling, however, the appeals court said the United States government may re-try the five.

Two others were found not guilty.

MACKASEY ON WRIT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A writ was filed in federal court Monday alleging that Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey acted unconstitutionally in suspending the right of visitors to Canada to apply for landed immigrant status.

Suraj Sander, a building contractor in Vancouver, said in an interview that the minister's move to plug the loophole was "invalid, ultra vires and unconstitutional because it violated the fundamental principle that Parliament and Parliament alone can change a major interpretation in any act."

"He's acting like a dictator. In this democratic system we can't give power to one minister to do what he likes without going through Parliament."

He said he wanted the court to impose a temporary stay on the minister's order until Parliament reconvenes.

British MPs Protest Rules For Canadian Immigrants

LONDON (CP) — A Conservative member of Parliament has appealed to the government to ease new immigration regulations for Canadians, Australians and New Zealanders.

"On this festival day of loyalty," said John Biggs-Davison, referring to the Queen's silver wedding anniversary, "should we not be assured that our fellow subjects from Australia, Canada and New Zealand will be treated here as members of one family on the basis of reciprocity?"

He was one of a number of Conservatives who protested the "weakening" of historic ties.

Sir Bernard Braine, MP for an Essex riding, said the regulations were "unfair, stupid and in the long term short-sighted." Ten other Conservative MPs joined Braine in signing a motion of protest.

Biggs-Davison raised the point in the House of Commons Monday recalling that new immigration regulations coming into effect Jan. 1 will make it more difficult for Commonwealth citizens to obtain long-term job permits in Britain.

Julian Amery, a junior foreign office minister, countered that Commonwealth citizens will not be treated as aliens.

"They will continue to enjoy full rights here, including the right to vote, to hold public office and the right to join the police and armed forces."

As James Callaghan, Labor member and former home secretary, charged that Amery's reply was misleading, the foreign office minister insisted that "there is nothing in the new immigration rules to make it more difficult for Australians, Canadians or New Zealanders to come here or be less welcome."

Also in London, former prime minister John Diefenbaker said today he is "deeply concerned" about the effect in Canada of proposed new British rules.

Human Rights Take Beating

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — "Repression of basic human rights appears to be spreading throughout the world in alarming ways, says Amnesty International.

The human rights organization said Monday that its statistics show more people were detained and tortured for their political and religious beliefs thus far in 1972 than in any year since the organization began its work 10 years ago.

Interim reports indicate a record number of complaints has been filed with the organization's field offices regarding torture, detention without trial and mysterious disappearances.

These were reported by Prof. James P. Harrison, the United States representative of the London-based private organization working for the release of "all prisoners of conscience."

He discussed the situation in an interview after presenting Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim with an appeal for the release of 12 prisoners in 12 countries. Amnesty International has consultative status with the United Nations.

Picked to dramatize violations of human rights, the dozen "symbolic" cases are part of thousands whose cases have been reported to the organization.

They include opponents of apartheid in South Africa, Jehovah's Witnesses in Spain, advocates of Formosan independence and critics of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Harris said the use of inhuman methods as a political tool seems to be spreading from Communist or Fascist countries to those with at least the appearance of a democratic system.

He listed the Philippines, Thailand and South Korea where martial law has been declared recently.

Harrison charged that in some countries, notably Brazil, Greece and South Africa, torture is used not only to obtain information but also to "terrorize the population."

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

Good exporter and commercial buying pushed the rapeseed prices about four cents above previous close levels by mid-session today. Heavy trading near the close moved the prices continually higher with three months reaching the 10-cent maximum trading limit.

Flax also had fairly good trading but gains somewhat easier than rapeseed.

Soybean meal gained $1 a ton and soybean oil moved up 25 points. Corn futures advanced a cent but wheat futures were irregular. Oats gained a cent.

Strong factors in the buying of commodities in the soybean group were bad weather and export demand for meal and oil. prices of the end-products were firm to strong at the cash level.

A block of 350,000 shares of Johnson and Johnson changed hands at $123¼, down 3⅞. Valued at $43.14 million, this was the eighth-largest trade in terms of dollar value ever consummated on the big board and the biggest so far this year.

Toronto

London
